To 54 Countries We Recognize Russia Nudist Idiocy Birth Control. 2 Views

—By Arthur Brisbane—

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT asks 54 countries to keep their armies at home, and preserve peace, on which depend "happiness, prosperity, the very lives of the men, women and children who inhabit the whole world."

The President puts the airplane first among attacking weapons that "fixed fortifications" can no longer resist, and expects all nations "wholly to eliminate from possession and use weapons which make possible successful attack."

Most important is the President's suggestion that "all the nations enter into a solemn, definite pact of non-aggression."

And that, according to Senator Borah, is an official recognition of Russia. If so, it puts an end to a ridiculous situation, bad for business.

The suggested non-aggressive pact, whatever it might be worth in cases of "insult to national honor," may prove to be the "world's best peace hope." The suggestion to "eliminate weapons that make possible successful attack" cannot be adopted unless the nations give up all airplanes. That, they cannot and will not do.

Any fleet of commercial airplanes, within 24 hours, can be adapted to dropping explosives and poison gas that would destroy any city.

Paris calls President Roosevelt's message "a beautiful sermon," "very pious, very lofty." France "will accept President Roosevelt's suggestion in principle," while reserving certain rights involving national security.

Public opinion in America will also reserve certain rights, if only as a matter of economy. It cost us too much to get ready in a hurry, last time, and after the billions were spent we had, to show for them, only airships that wouldn't fly, and surface ships that never went to sea.

Paris talk never checks the intelligent French in their preparation for what may come. As a "national defense measure," French factories were ordered yesterday to report to the "passive defense bureau" on the number of their employes and their capacity. This will tell the French government how many men it has ready to manufacture explosives, chemicals, airplanes and other useful things.

Japan proceeds along lines laid out for Asia, regardless of Europe's League of Nations. Her plans include free colony in northern China, and the capture of Peiping, the "Forbidden City," seems near. Rich Chinese are leaving Peiping, hurrying with movable property into the safer foreign areas of Tientsin. American missionaries are moving away from the Peiping area.

The Stock Exchange, which had been drifting, was pleased with President Roosevelt's peace message. Stocks went up from one to five points. Brokers and speculators remember what happened when the other big war came and the Stock Exchange closed.

"Nudist colonies," where men and women go naked, are reopening for the season in New Jersey and elsewhere. In one camp nudist cooks prepare food served by nudist waiters and waitresses.

Decency develops slowly, the other thing develops rapidly.

It took the human race, probably, a million years to learn to wear clothes, as they gradually lost their original covering of reddish hair. It takes them five minutes to change into "nudist" idots.

Give Mr. Hitler credit for one thing. He has told Germans literally, to "keep their shirts on." They will spend this summer fully clothed. They invented nudism and practiced it, but there will be no more of it under Hitler.

New York State's "Birth Control Federation" meets next Friday. "Fewer and better babies" is the idea, or, as some express it, "babies only when their mothers want them."

On religious grounds many believe that birth control is sinful. Others explore it, because, if three mothers had known and believed in it, there wouldn't have been any Caruso, Carlyle or Napoleon.

Common sense suggests that there is no reason why a mother should have a baby if she doesn't want it, and no reason for allowing a rich woman, with a competent doctor, to know all about birth control, while making it a crime to inform the poor, for whom extra children mean extra trouble.

Lowell Merchants Move to Aid Factory Hands

(Pictures on Pages 2 and 4)

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

(Tomorrow will begin an expose of Worcester sweatshops, together with further news from Lowell. Other cities will be taken up in forthcoming articles.)

Lowell wage earners, as have sweatshop victims in Boston and other cities, have met the dollar and penny contents of their weekly pay envelopes whose figures even a child can arithmetically manipulate, with stoical patience, but with ever-growing fears of actual starvation and loss of their tenement homes.

A Lowell couple, both past 50, experienced shoe workers employed at the same factory, one week earned a joint income of $5 and "made the best of it.' Tales of skilled girls receiving as little as five cents a day are common.

Pay Envelopes Tell Tale of Industrial Collapse

At a time in their lives when security for the future is not only a necessity but imperative, the Lowell couple mentioned above have been forced to continue life on a daily basis of meagre income.

Thirty years of experience as a vamper did little to swell the wife's weekly income to a continual living wage. Occasionally her net earnings dropped to $1.64 for a week's employment.

Although at other times this woman got as "high" as $12, she and her husband averaged together for the past several months only $10 weekly at the John Filling Company.

Peace for the United States of America

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S effort to keep peace among the war-mad nations of Europe is highly commendable as long as his performance is limited to sound advice and does not take the form of active participation in Europe's quarrels and conflicts.

As they stand the President's messages to foreign governments may not mean a great deal or, unfortunately, may mean altogether too much.

The steadying function of the Congress should be to make sure that they do NOT mean too much —that they shall not mean involvement of the peaceful United States in Europe's destructive wars.

President Roosevelt's plan, if it is a plan, or at any rate President Roosevelt's proposal, if it is anything more than peaceful words, contemplates an agreement which would be a cross between the League of Nations and the Kellogg pact—an inter-

"GERMANY MUST LIVE"

The ears of the world tuned today to this man, Chancellor Hitler, German Nazi leader, for on his utterance to the Reichstag depended the peace of Europe and the whole world. A corporal in the Austrian army during the war, the German leader knows full well what the horrors of that great conflict brought, and today he had to choose whether Germany would re-arm or accept its present status under the Versailles treaty.

Warns of Peril of Communism; Asks Only Security for Germany

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Berlin, May 17 (INS)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler this afternoon in a historic and impassioned address before the Reichstag announced Germany's acceptance of President Roosevelt's disarmament proposals in a speech to the Reichstag, marked by its conciliatory tone.

He agreed to proceed toward disarmament along the lines suggested at Geneva by Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain, whose disarmament proposals were recommended to the world yesterday by the American President.

While demanding complete equality for Germany with the other nations of Europe, Chancellor Hitler insisted this need not be achieved by increasing her armaments.

"She is ready to dissolve her entire army and destroy her arms," he said, "if the other nations will do likewise."

He denied that Germany contemplated an invasion of France or Poland, emphasizing that his nation is devoid of all instruments of aggression.

EQUAL RIGHTS FOR ALL

The absence of the cheering storm troops phalanxes usually present for important Nazi and government ceremonies, was especially noteworthy.

The chancellor, beginning in an

TROOPER CUTAS BOTTLE BLOWS

State troopers are prepared to defend themselves against attacks by human being and even animals, but when inanimate objects stage offensives they are usually caught off guard.

That happened today when a bottle of home-brewed beer, being carried by Trooper John Dunphy with others in a case from Quincy police station to a truck, exploded and laid his head open. Six stitches were required in Quincy Hospital to close the wound.

Dunphy and Lieut. Harold Williams removed to the State House 1200 gallons of beer and dumped 23 barrels of wine, the whole confiscated in six months' raids.

Infant Found at Beacon Hill Door

A baby boy, nine months old, was found shortly after 10 o'clock today in the doorway of the Christian Endeavor Society headquarters, 8 Mt. Vernon st., almost in the shadow of the State House.

Taken to the Chardon st. home, the child was recognized by officials there, who said it was the son of Mrs. Charles Pantages, and that its mother had left the home at 9:30 with the babyp in her arms.

Mrs. Pantages is separated from her husband, who is now living in Maine, and the child was born at Long Island Hospital, from which Mrs. Pantages had been discharged.

Washington Sees Hope in Hitler's Speech

Washington, May 7 (AP)—State Department officials today described the speech of Chancellor Hitler of Germany on disarmament as encouragingly conciliatory.

Experts department disarmaments noted particularly that Hitler expressed his aproval of President Roosevelt's appeal for abolition of offensive weapons, declared his willingness to accept international control of armaments and stated that Germany was willing to count its national police force and storm troopers in figuring its armed forces.

Hitler's announced approval of the MacDonald arms reduction plan in principle was seen as a hopeful sign for progress at the Geneva conference scheduled to reopn tomorrow. Especial importance was attached to the statement that Germagy was not thinking of a war of aggression and did not want to re-arm but rather wanted other nations to disarm.

A willingness to obtain modification of the restrictions of the Versailles treaty by peaceful methods rather than armed force was the interpretation officials placed upon Hitler's words.

LOWELL MERCHANTS SEEK TO AID WORKERS

PENNY WAGES CUT INCOME OF STORES

ly gone into the factories only to find, in some cases, that they could earn no more than $2 a week and sometimes only 25 cents a day.

Such girls numbered in the thousands throughout the state working in more than 700 Massachusetts sweatshops at wages that do not suffice human wants, investigated by the Boston American, the Sunday Advertiser, the Massachusetts Bureau of Industries, the Consumers' League of Massachusetts and the Simmons College School of Social Work disclosed.

At the same time legitimate business is being pushed very close to the wall, unable to meet unfair competition in the country's economic crisis which demands the riddance of sweatshop wages and sweatshop conditions.

Getting 22 to 40 cents a case for French cord turning from the Merrimack Shoe Company, one pauline's weekly wages averaged from $6 to $8. The most she ever found in her pay envelope was $10, although at other times $2.70 was her weekly income.

Three Cents an Hour Gets Small Returns

The United Shoe Novelty Company paid George, 22 years old, three cents a case for place lining. Even with overtime he could finish only 50 to 55 cases daily, at the most. His earnings netted him $7.50 weekly, although once he got $3.45.

The willingness to work three hours more than her regular schedule in the hope to increase her earnings, got for Katherine, 22, dresser and sock liner at the Majestic Shoe Company, but nine cents—three cents an hour. Evening work on samples was hardly worth the effort she put into them.

Receiving 12 cents a case, this 17-year-old girl, at the end of a week's work had an envelope that read sometimes $6, but usually $3 and $4. And to bring her efforts to even this law wage, she sacrificed many minutes of her lunch hour to her job.

Mothers, with families, were forced to leave their kitchen apron at home, and don one in the factory to help increase the family income. This mother, who did fancy stitching for the United Novelty Shoe Company, made $1.87 one week, managing, however, to average $4.75. Her husband, who worked as an outside shoe cutter, and formerly brought home $24 for his week's time and labor, sometimes made only $6.24.

1½ Cents a Case Gets This Girl Small Wage

Pretty little Frances, only 16, worked for the Laganas Shoe Company on a piece work basis of a cent and a half a case.

Could a $2 weekly average satisfy her needs?

"I was the only one in my family of four who was employed," she said. "My father has been unable to find work for three years. For one three-week period, I could only average $1.63. Very often I made only twenty-five cents a day. In rush times, I voluntarily gave up most of my lunch time to work. I had to run up and down five flights of stairs on errands, but that was outside my regular work and I got no money for that."

The Merrimack Shoe Company paid Mary 22 cents a case for French cord turning. Although this girl has had four years' experience, she averaged only seven to 10 cases at most.

Mrs. B., who went to work as a vamper at the Becker Brothers Shoe Company last August, averaged only $5 a week for this work. Her highest wage was $14, although she earned as low as $1.50 for a full week's work during the slack season.

Sixteen-year-old Dorothy received $1.52 as average wage from the Laganas Shoe Company, she said, claiming her highest weekly earnings at this factory for cleaning linings for shoes at three cents a case to have been only $3.95.

At this same plant, another girl told of having to purchase shoes which the management claims she spoiled, paying 32 for them.

"And if we wanted to buy shoes for ourselves, we paid $1.50 for them when they cost approximately twenty cents in labor."

A Never-Ending Tale of Grinding Labor

Yvonne, who did fancy covering at the Alden Wood Heel company, once received $1.17 in her pay envelope, although she never made more than $6 at this job.

"And for such a little pay, my hands got red and chapped from dipping them constantly into the freezing cold liquid cement with which I had to work."

For 48 hours work, Viola got weekly amounts that went something like this—$4.95 and $4.91, this figure several times.

"My lowest wage was little over a dollar one week," she told. "The only chance you stood of making a little extra, was working during lunch time. It gave you a chance to get a little ahead."

Olga, a specialized worker, running fancy stitching on shoes, was an average weekly incumbent to the Becker Brothers Shoe company of $8.

"The most I ever earned,

INCOME TOO SMALL—FORCED TO QUIT MILL

For spending two months at a Lowell shoe factory, Miss Penepole Poulickas of Lowell received two pay envelopes. One of them won for the large sum of 59 cents, while the other was away above that with the large sum of $2.09. She decided that that was too much slaving and quit. "I'd rather stay at home and do housework," she said.

SCENE IN LOWELL—PAY DAY BRINGS NO JOY HERE

Although the figures in the upper right hand corner of their pay envelopes tell a pitiful story of low wages, these Lowell shoe workers are amusing themselves in a comparative study of inadequate living wage. One of the group of girls had a life long ambition to become a nurse, but had to go to work in one of the Lowell sweatshops because of conditions at home. The figure noted appears on the envelope—that's the amount the particular girl received as a week's wage. Here are the figures: $1.23, $4.91, 75 cents and $1.17.

BONUS BACKERS URGE SALES TAX IN CONGRESS

$3,300,000,000 Public Works Program Proposed for Vets

Washington, May 17 (INS)—Enactment of a manufacturers' sales tax to finance the administration's $3,300,000,000 public works program if payment of the soldiers' bonus to the needy is coupled with it was proposed today by a group of House liberals as the President prepared to send his public works message to Congress.

The movement was initiated by some of the most bitter opponents of the manufacturers' tax last year, and is expected to be submitted to the President.

Among those studying the plan were Rep. Cullen of New York, assistant Democratic leader, and Rep. Patman (D.) of Texas, sponsor of cash payment of the bonus.

"There are many members who have opposed the sales tax who are willing to support it if the government also will issue bonds to pay the bonus to needy veterans," said Rep. McClintic (D.) of Oklahoma, member of the ways and means committee. "The idea has substantial support."

Von Stroheim Must Pay for Child's Support

Los Angeles, May 17—Despite the plea of Erich von Stroheim, once famous film actor and director, that he is without funds or employment, the court order compelling him to pay $75 a week for the care of his 17-year-old son, Erich, Jr., will stand, it was ruled in superior court.

Von Stroheim was seeking a reduction of the sum. He had petitioned to have the weekly sum of $75 reduced to $15. Mrs. Mary A. von Stroheim, who divorced the actor-director 14 years ago, opposed modification of the support order.

The people of the United States have definitely decided that they do not want to be a part of the League of Nations, and also that they do not want to "put teeth in the Kellogg pact."

The League of Nations has demonstrated its ineffectiveness as a peace league and its dangers as a political despotism.

* * *

ON the other hand, putting teeth in the Kellogg pact means putting bayonets in it.

And that means nothing less than the United States participating in European disputes and deciding them in the last analysis by force of arms.

Experience has proved, and is daily proving further, that without force of arms neither the League of Nations nor the Kellogg pact is effective as a peace league; but with force of arms these pacts cease to be peace pacts and become war pacts.

They would contemplate and would compel the intrusion of the United States into European entanglements, and the final decision of disputes by the arbitrament of war.

If both the League of Nations and the Kellogg pact, when sufficiently supplied with teeth, mean the participation of the United States in the wars of Europe, how is the mongrel offspring of the mismated pair going to mean anything different?

As soon as we regard the practical working of the Roosevelt proposition, we come flat against the stone wall of these hard facts:

Who is to decide which nation is the aggressor?

And what is to compel the aggressor to cease his aggression?

* * *

THE answer to the first question obviously is that a controlling number of more or less prejudiced, and more or less directly involved foreign nations, will decide this serious question, largely from the viewpoint of self-interest and political partisanship.

And the answer to the second question is that the only way that such a decision can be made effective is to control, or endeavor to control, the action of the indicted nation or group of nations by force of arms.

This means nothing but another world war, in which the United States this time would necessarily be involved not by a deliberate judgment and through the exercise of its own free will, but by its definite adherence to the league or pact, and the fulfillment of the obligations inevitably incurred.

Stripped of the fuss and feathers of fine words and confusing phrases, the question for the American people to decide is simply this:

What does the United States desire for ITSELF?

Does it want peace or does it want war?

If it wants war, then let it involve itself in European entanglements.

If it wants peace, then let it keep free from foreign entanglements as George Washington enjoined.

* * *

Let it keep the peace at home, and devote itself to proving to the war-stricken world the benefits to be derived, in progress and prosperity, in wealth and happiness, from practicing peaceful policies and pursuing the paths of peace.

Let us hope that Mr. Roosevelt's proposal means nothing but helpful words of sound advice to Europe without participation in their endless wars.

Otherwise, it may mean the loss of peace and returning prosperity here at home, and the involvement in unfathomable disaster of this great country of ours, which should securely remain the leader in peace and progress, in liberty and enlightenment, for all the world.

MAJOR'S TRYSTS WITH OTHEI GIRLS BARED IN JELKE CASE

FICKLE SWAIN'S AMOURS ARE TOLD BY MAID

Saw Him Often in Flat in Birmingham, Affidavit Says

Newport, R. I., May 17—A free and easy apartment in Birmingham, Ala., peopled by crooks, dope fiends and drunks, was the scene of Mrs. Eugenia "Neenie" Woodward Jelke's love trysts while she and her millionaire husband honeymooned in the southern city, it was charged in E. Frazier Jelke's divorce suit here.

While Newport's socialites fought for admission to the crowded courtroom, Mrs. Effie Wagner Bailey, a pretty divorcee, described the place in which she says she found the beautiful and socially prominent Mrs. Jelke and a man identified only as the "Major," on two occasions in January, 1931.

NURSE GIVES SHOCK

Another flurry of excitement occurred when lawyers for the millionaire broke introduced a deposition from Rosena Klenzler, a nurse who had attended Jelke's father in 1929.

She said that more than a year before her marriage the niece of the late United States Senator Oscar Underwood of Alabama was found in a bedroom with her fiance in the Jelke Newport mansion—"The Eagle's Nest."

The nurse also told of seeing the couple lying together upon a divan in the Jelke's Chicago home. She pictured the 32-year-old bridegroom as sitting up suddenly and exclaiming to his father, who was ill in bed in the same room:

"Poppy, don't you think I've got a lovely wife? She's so sweet and gentle!"

ORIENTAL STYLE TRYSTS

The Birmingham flat where Mrs. Bailey said Mrs. Jelke and her mysterious "Major" lingered and loved had all the appurtenances of an Oriental vice den.

For stimulation, a guest could get heroin from the proprietress, Mrs. Hartman, and could get morphine, too, if he brought his own needle.

"Did you ever buy any dope from Mrs. Hartman?" the witness was asked.

"Oh, dear, no!" she replied. "Did you ever buy any whiskey there?"

"I should say not!"

Mrs. Bailey said she went to Mrs. Hartman's on fourteen different occasions in an effort to find "a gentleman in whom I was interested."

OTHER WOMEN

Twice while there, she said, she encountered Mrs. Jelke and the "Major."

Mrs. Bailey was so familiar with the lay-out in the apartment that she volunteered upon the witness stand to draw a floor plan of the place.

Mrs. Jelke's "Major" wasn't constant in his attentions to the millionaire's bride, but "played the field" in his attentions to Birmingham's belles, it was brought out at the hearing.

In fact, the dashing Southern swain practically wore a groove in the front steps of Mrs. Hartman's establishment. And every time he came, it seemed, he escorted a new love.

TELLS MAJOR'S LOVELIFE

After asserting that Mrs. Jelke and the "Major" occupied a room in the place on two occasions in January, 1931, the maid described the disordered condition of the chamber when they left it.

Then she added in her affidavit that the "Major" made frequent visits there with other women.

NINE WAIT CALL IN KIDNAP INQUIRY

Jury Report on McMath Case May Be in by Night

Barnstable, May 17—Nine witnesses remained today to be heard by the Barnstable County grand jury in special session on the kidnaping of 10-year-old Margaret "Peggy" McMath.

On the amount of time consumed for each depends the report on whether or not Kenneth and Cyril Buck, Harwichport brothers, will be indicted in connection with the affair.

POLICE CHIEF HEARD

District Attorney William C. Crossley said he had hopes that all would be heard before night and arranged for notification to Judge Edward F. Hanify at New Bedford in time to allow the drive here for receipt of the report.

Police Chief E. E. Hall of Harwich, who announced a second confession by Kenneth Buck and who found the real dungeon in which Peggy was held captive, was one of those on today's list.

Walter Cahoon, a neighbor of the Buck brothers; Charles Holmes of Harwich, who sold Cyril Buck a mattress like the one found in the dungeon, and Lieut. Ernest Bradford, state detective, are others on today's list.

Dist.-Atty. Crossley declined an interview with Atty. Elias Burwick of Worcester, counsel for Kenneth Buck, who has announced several times that "all has not been told."

BUCK MINUS COUNSEL

The prosecutor invited Atty. Burwick to present any information he might have to the grand jury unless, it was in the form of a defense, which would not be allowed.

Cyril Buck, who claims his part in the case was only an interest in securing the safe return of Peggy, has not yet secured counsel. He conferred several times with a Cape Cod lawyer, the latter finally announcing he would not handle the case.

SECRET CLUES ARE FOUND IN RIDLEY DEATH

Four Bags of Bogus Coins Discovered in Victim's Office

Following their week-long investigation, police believed they had unearthed some definite clues in the mystery surrounding the slaying of the eccentric aged real estate dealer, Edward A. Ridley, and his secretary, Lee Weinstein, in Ridley's dingy sub-cellar office on the lower East Side, last week. What the nature of these clues was they refused to say.

One surprise discovery was the finding of four bags of counterfeit coins, some of them dating back to 1870, in the sub-cellar office. The bags were hidden under a pile of papers. After examination of the coins police expressed the belief that these had been taken in by Ridley's department store, in which the 86-year-old recluse was a partner until the store closed, years ago, and had been kept by him for some unexplained reason.

A police theory that a second mystery woman had played a part in the life of Weinstein, the Jekyl-Hyde secretary, was blown up when it was found that a woman in Norfolk, Va., who had corresponded with Leon Weinstein at the Hotel Belvedere here, was not known to the Ridley secretary.

LENORE ULRIC AFTER DIVORCE

Pittsburgh, May 17 (AP)—Lenore Ulric, dynamic actress, said today that not only is she going to divorce her movie-actor husband, Sidney Blackmer, but she is through with marriage "for ever and ever."

"Our marriage is tragic," she said. "It's nothing but a long-distance, telegraph love. We are constantly separated, and marriage, I have found, doesn't mix with our professions."

Miss Ulric, appearing locally, says the divorce soon will be heard in court. She and Blackmer were married in 1929.

SWAIN'S ARDOR MEANS COURT

Ellis was arrested last night by Patrolman William Whalen on the grounds surrounding the home of Mrs. E. Martha Tucker, Hunnewell circle. Police charge that he has been warned three times to stop annoying a pretty maid employed in the Tucker home.

Sergt. Patrick King asked that the case be continued until tomorrow to allow police to investigate other charges against Ellis. He was held in $500.

Here Is Why Police Gave Up Shotguns

Supt. Crowley explained today his somewhat mysterious order recalling all shotguns from headquarters from all division except Charlestown, East Boston and Brighton.

The guns were bein ghandled by too many men who didn't know how to use them and how to take care of them and the superintendent feared an accident or damage to the guns, he said.

They are being left in Charlestown as a precaution against State prison uprisings, in East Boston as a precution against Deer Island uprising and in Brighton as a precaution against an uprising of bulls at the abbatoir.

Sort of a headquarters bull to the bulls about other bulls.

GRINDING POVERTY MARKS TRAIL OF PENNY WAGES

for a full week, was $10. But there were times that $3 for a week's work was all I could make," she claimed.

For tacking inner soles in the stock room of the Majestic Shoe Company, another worker has an envelope to substantiate her weekly income of $3.18.

On bench work at the Becker Brothers Shoe Company, Blanche could only make about $2 or $2.50 a week.

Jane is supposed to pay $5 a week for her board and room to her married sister with whom she lives. She must support herself. Yet her envelopes from the same factory were most always below that figure.

For cementing straps on vamps, stitching them and exercising extreme care that the ends meet she receives twelve cents a case for 72 shoes.

"Nobody would keep me and give me my board but my sister," she said. She is an average worker and has been employed at this type of work for four years.

Thirty-six cents a week for almost two months during the slack season was the amount Loretta took away weekly with her from the Becker factory.

This Girl Earned as Low as 36c a Week

A 19-year-old girl, who has been working for three years at a shoe factory, averaging around $3 a week, claimed she was threatened with dismissal if she continued to urge other girl workers to demand minimum wage.

Although at one time she earned $14 bucking shoes, another girl employed at the United Novelty Shoe Company told of receiving $1 for 48 hours presence at the plant, many of which she worked.

It cost Stella $1 for a weekly pass to ride on the street car from her home near the Tyngsboro line to her job in the Laganas factory. And although in the nine months she worked at a bench she reached only a peak of $2.10, her family supplied the necessary funds for the pass in the belief that the girl was learning a trade.

Promises to place her at a machine with a chance at earning a little more were not kept, she said, but she continued to work for such amounts as thirty-six cents, seventy-five cents, $1, $1.10 and $2.02 a week, hoping that some day the promise would be carried out.

With weekly envelopes the amounts of which have been stated, it is no wonder that Lowell merchants are being seriously affected by the drop of consuming power of the town's population.

And because they fully realize that on these mass workers depends the life of their various businesses, the socially-minded merchants of Lowell have been instrumental in bringing together, with the aid of Mayor Charles Slowey, a representative committee to act as intermediaries with manufacturers from whose benches and factories the workers have gone out on strike.

Homes Bear Witness to Bad Living Conditions

The homes of these low wage earners tell a similiar story of meagre surroundings, furnishings, congestion, under-nourishment and fatigue.

Large families are crowded into small tenement flats. Beds are placed throughout the tenement, in practically every room except the kitchen. And even in this cooking chamber, a couch is set up. Relatives have joined together under one roof.

Families have moved out into the country, at the end of the city limits, to take the rewards of the soil to meet the needs of hungry mouths.

Children, ragged and underclothed, wear hand-me-downs, which hard-working mothers after long hours of labor, have sewed on under gas-light at night.

Fathers are cutting down their own rations, that their children might have enough on which to develop.

Men, who during better times, invested their meagre earnings in small houses, to secure their families for that rainy day, are threatened with the loss of their dwellings, unable to meet bank demands for mortgage interest.

Savings accounts, scrimped out of past earnings for old age, are being depleted to meet present needs.

These thousands of Lowell workers find themselves the victims of a vicious cycle of unfair competition. Bitter as their plight is, they have risen to demand their inalienable right—a living wage.

Tomorrow — Worcester sweatshops and more from Lowell.

LOWELL GIRL'S PAY for SIX WEEKS

Her job was cementing vamp and lining together

"Prepare—Save." That's the message on all of the pay envelopes received by a girl worker in a mill at Lowell. But please look at the amounts this hard working girl received on six pay-days for cementing vamps and linings together. How much could you save on these incomes? What would you be preparing for? You will note that this Lowell girl collected the handsome sum of $6.59 in six weeks.

EVEN 24 CENTS A DAY IS VITAL TO THIS GIRL

Yvonne's hands, which were once soft and white, are now red and chapped from her long hours of toil in a shoe factory.

"I started doing fancy covering at the Alden Wood Heel Company here in Lowell, last August," Yvonne said. "This past winter we found the work-room so chilly that we frequently had to wear our coats and overshoes all day. Time after time while working, I dipped my hands into the freezing cold Liquid cement which we used in covering heels. If you don't believe it, just look at my hands"

"Four of us girls working together were paid a total of 24 cents per case for the work we did. That meant only six cents a case for each of us. The most I could earn in a day was $1, even with over-time. The largest week's wages I ever got there was $6, but sometimes when work was slack I only took $1.17 home in my pay envelope at the end of a week. I went to the factory at a quarter before seven in the morning, sometimes waited around until 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon before I got anything to do, and then often worked until 7 or 7.45 that evening. Often I stayed there all day, and only made 24 cents.

"Almost every week when I got my pay envelope and opened it I found that from 20 to 50 cents had been duducted for broken heels. In almost every case of heels we received from other departments there were a few damaged ones, and that was no fault of my own."

Although she could only get such pitifully small amounts for her long hours of labor, this 17-year-old girl has been forced to earn what she could to help her family in their constant struggle to keep body and soul together. At home there are two little brothers, one 13, and the younger only 8, who must somehow be fed, clothed and sent to school.

"Sometimes I used to get so tired sitting around the factory for half a day waiting for piece-work, but what could I do? If I stayed at home I couldn't earn even 24 cents, but when I was lucky and worked hard I could make as much as 70 or 80 cents, and sometimes even a whole dollar," she said with a plucky little smile lighting up her face.

Lips Admit Boston Chinese's Wife

Seattle, May 17 (AP)—Yee Ho Lee, wife of a Boston merchant, forbidden entrance to the United States because her ears had no lobes, won entry today because of her lips.

Immigration authorities here would not admit her because a picture of a five-year-old Chinese girl, named Yee Ho Lee, who left this country in 1918, showed the child's ears had lobes while those of today's Yee Ho Lee did not.

The husband, Wong Shew Leung, appealed to the Department of Labor at Washington, D. C., which ruled the contours of the lips of the child and the grown-up show a resemblance. Leung and his wife arrived here almost two months ago.

Edison Taxes Pay Waltham Workers

City Treasurer Harlan Cutter, of Waltham, will be able to forego immediate request for loans from banks as a result of the agreement of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company to pay 50 per cent of its 1933 taxes to the city, amounting to about $52,000, as a prepayment.

The company will be given five per cent interest for the prepayment and in consideration the city will pay its accured indebtedness of about $15,000 to the corporation.

Harriman for U. S. Shop Drive

HENRY I. HARRIMAN of Boston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, arriving here from Washington, voicing high praise of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser expose of sweatshop conditions and expressing the hope that similar conditions throughout the nation would be speedily remedied.

HENRY I. HARRIMAN

"Such conditions are unthinkable," he said. "Sweat shops destroy the purchasing power of the country.

"Here is a little philosophy that I have followed: There is no advantage nationally of having anything cheap if that cheapness is the result of inadequate wages, unfair working hours and the omission of dividends.

"I have great hopes that this national industrial bill now being drafted in Washington will immediately change conditions nationally. That is even better than doing it only in our own state. This bill is aimed at giving fair wages, working hours and dividends. It will eliminate cut-throat competition, substituting for it a competition based on superior skill."

WYOMING VOTES 8 TO 1 FOR REPEAL

Cheyenne, Wyo., May 17 (AP)—Wyoming has voted six to one in favor of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment.

Precinct conventions elected 456 delegates favoring repeal to 76 pledged to vote for retention of prohibition. The returns were from half the most populous precincts. Many of the 667 precincts held no conventions.

At county meetings tomorrow delegates will be named to a state convention in Casper May 25.

Rhode Island, Michigan and Wisconsin have voted for repeal. New Jersey yesterday named a virtually solid wet delegation to a convention to consider ratification of the repeal resolution.

The recently legalized 3.2 per cent beer will be legal in Wyoming Friday.

A Nickel and a Penny This Girl's Return for Week of Hard Labor

A six-cent worker.

That's what Stella found herself one week as a bench worker

She wasn't good at school with books and things, but as

She wasn't goot at school with books and things, but as a cementer of tabs in a shoe factory, she proved herself an adept worker.

Yet the first week her pay read thirty-six cents. And then not long after, after she had put in a full week's work, her earnings WERE SIX CENTS.

One of a family of ten, including her mother and father, Stella, the oldest girl, in eight months of employment brought home as her largest weekly income $2.40.

"Last June I left school and went to work. My cousin took me to the shop and I was told what and how to work at another girl. The foreiady gave me a case of shoes to do, for which I was to get 15 cents, cementing tabs, overlacing and then putting stays on the shoes.

"For a while I stood by and watched what I was told to do. After about 15 minutes, the foreiady took me over to a bench where four other girls were doing the same kind of work. There were ten girls on the other side of the bench doing something else.

"When I finished that case, I was given a case of saddles to do, and for that I got five cents. I overlaced, too, and cemented the collars on the pumps before the French corders got them to work on. For that it was three cents a case. Then we were cut down to one cent a case. For what I used to get five cents a case, cementing stays and quarters, I was cut down to three cents.

"One week I got six cents—for a whole week it was. For that I had to go to the factory at quarter past 7 every morning and stay until around 5 o'clock. I actually worked three days on doubling, but was there all week, for that six cents.

"I know I did many cases of shoes, but how I only figured out six cents for my work, is still a mystery to me.

"It cost me a dollar that week for a trolley pass. I stayed on, my family making it possible for me to have the street car pass, because I was supposed to learn the work on the French cord machine.

"One week I got an envelope for 59 cents. My last pay was a little more than a dollar. I worked pretty fast. I'm not very smart at books, but I was a good worker in the factory. I did fine there.

"It used to be like school, though. You couldn't talk, and even while you waited at your bench for work you had to be quiet; just keep sitting and saying nothing.

"I had to pay five cents for my notebook to keep track of my work. And the scissors that I needed for the job I took from home. If we didn't return the lacing needle we were charged five cents.

"On the back of that envelope that I got with a nickle and a penny is said: 'Be Thrifty.' Funny, isn't it?"

Mrs. Roosevelt Pleads for Ban on Sweatshops

Washington, May 17 (AP)—The often-voiced opinion that this country is "going through a revolution" was expressed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in an address before a luncheon of the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

"I think we are," said Mrs. Roosevelt, "and we want to know as we go along in what direction our revolution is going."

She appealed to the club women of the country to assume their responsibility in "directing the revolution."

She gave three principal avenues in which organized womanhood might prove their power—interest in the child, everybody's child; watching of governmental economies to see they take place in the right direction; and buying so carefully as to make the sweatshop impossible.

The reason for taking a special interest in children at this time, Mrs. Roosevelt said, is that "when this period of hardship is over, we won't find ourselves saddled for a generation with more tuberculosis, a great increase in crime, and other things that go with poor food, poor homes and poor education."

Pronouncing women the economists, Mrs. Roosevelt said they should watch in town, state and nation to see that real economies take place.

She appealed to women in buying to "go back to some of the standards we used to have, when we considered it more worth while to have one really good dress than three that didn't amount to much."

The club women applauded her enthusiastically when she added, "let us resolve that whatever we buy shall not be made out of the blood of others."

"Extraordinary things have come out in the past few weeks as to the wages women and children are working for at present for unscrupulous manufacturers, as low as two cents an hour, making a wage that no one can live on, and making it almost impossible for good shops and manufacturers to live up to standard."

I LIKE MY JOB... but not the handle

I WISH THEY HAD SOME other title for me as head of this business. "President" is rather "high fallutin" and sort of gives me a pain.

● For a bank—"President" is all right. So it is for a large manufacturing plant, and no doubt in a hundred other classifications. But such a handle doesn't suit J. J. Curry of the Waldorf, for it doesn't describe what I am trying to do—at all.

● I think I'd prefer "General Supervisor" for it doesn't smack quite so much of mahogany furniture, Oriental rugs and hushed offices. "President," it seems to me, is an important, puffed up appearing gentleman—cold and distant—seldom seen.

● I like to spend my days nosing 'round in a hundred tasks. The commissary department, the delivery systems, improving our dish washing methods—every hour brings new problems to be worked over and improved. I am happy then for I have an intimate touch with a thousand details and the thousands who make up our personnel.

● I enjoy myself all day long—I like my job, but have no use for the title "President."

BEER LICENSES BRIBE RACKET IS PROBED

A beer license racket is under way in Boston, according to complaints made to Dist. Atty. William J. Foley, the Boston Evening American learned today.

Three applicants for licenses to sell beer claim they were approached by two different men, both prominent, who suggested that payment of $300, over and above the cost of the license, would assure them of getting their permits without delay.

In both instances thee complainants named the men who, they said, demanded graft, stating they could influence the Boston licensing board to act favorably on their petitions.

REFUSE TO COMPLAIN

Dist. Atty. Foley asked the informers to make formal complaints in order that he might prosecute, but both refused, stating they feared their businesses might be ruined and that they might never get their licenses.

The situation first came to the district attorney's attention after a secre police investigation.

He told the Boston American he feels there may be hundreds of cases handled in this manner and that he publicly invites any and al who have been so approached to give him details in order that he may go before the grand jury with the evidence.

Two of the complainants were South Boston dealers, one from Dorchester ave. and one from Broadway. The other was a Brighton man who said he thought he had political influence but found it didn't amount to much when it came to getting his license.

$300 EXTRA DEMANDED

In each case where complaint reached the authorities, the system of the racket was the same, according to the stories told by the dealers approached. After applying for their temporary permits, which cost $75, they were told to go to a certain office in a Tremont st. building where they would be "taken care of."

They said they went there and were flatly told, without any mincing of words or beating about the bush, that they would get their licenses right away if they paid $300 extra.

MORGAN LOAN TO MITCHELL

New York, May 17 (AP)—Testimony began today in the income tax fraud of Charles E. Mitchell, former president of the ational City Bank, accused of evading payment of any tax in 1929 and 1930 on income of more than $4,000,000.

Witnesses told how the banking ouse of J. P. Morgan & Co. held as collateral for a loan it made Mitchell on National City stock, part of which figures in this case.

The government charges that although this stock was pledged by Mitchell for the loan he pretended to give more than half of it to his wife in order to turn an actual net income into an apparent loss so that he would have to pay no income tax.

Frederick Sommer, deputy collector of internatl revenue, testifitd he had examined the income tax returns of Mitchell for 1929 and 1930. The returns were introduced in evidence, and Sommers went over their contents in detail.

Leonard A. Keyes, office manager in charge of the J. P. Morgan & Co. files, after examining a ledger he carried with him, said that Mitchell on Dec. 20, 1929, owed the Morgan firm $6,096,170.

On Dec. 31, 1931, he owed the Morgans, Keyes said, $5,858,038.30 and the same sum on March 7, 1932.

'Give Husband a Chance!'

Westcliff-on-Sea, England, May 17 (AP)—The Rev. T. H. Curtis, vicar of St. Paul's Church, gives this advice to wives:

"If your husband is quiet, don't imagine he is sulky. He may be trying to think of a suitable present for you.

"At the end of a tiring day don't ask him, 'What shall we have for dinner tomorrow?' That is your job.

"If you put his trousers in the press remember that the creases should come front and back— not at the sides.

"Do not expect too much of your husband. Remember he is only a man. He has not your advantages.

A "Big Fish"

GIRL KIDNAPED, IT IS FEARED

Worcester, May 17—Early morning screams of a girl, the shatter of a windshield and a lightless automobile opened a kidnap mystery in the Assonet st. section here today.

Police could find no one who knew the identity of the girl victim, but half a dozen residents of Assonet st. agreed that the girl was thrown into the car against her will.

The windshield was shattered, they said, by the foot of the girl during the struggle of two men abductors to force her into the machine.

The lights flashed off the car soon after the girl's screams aroused the residents, they said.

Betty Newell, Prettiest Deb of 1932, Elopes in N. Y.

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

New York, May 17 (US)—This much can be told—Betty Newell and Hugh McConnell have eloped!

And by the time these lines are read Betty and Hugh will be honeymooning in some secret spot.

I have only scant details concerning this unceremonious marriage of "the prettiest debutante of 1931-32." But the important fact is—Betty and Hugh were made as one "somewhere on Monday last."

The Newells made a formal announcement of the engagement last January and at that time it was hinted the wedding would take place in June.

Betty is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Newell of New York. She is the great-great-great-granddaughter of Theophilus Parsons, chief justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, whose son, Theophilus Parsons, Jr., was the dean of the Harvard law school.

She also is a great-great-granddaughter of William Wells, the first orthodox minister of Brattleboro, Vt., whose portrait by Gilbert Stuart, still in possession of the family, hung for many years in the main entrance of the public library in Boston.

Dr. Charles Chauncey, second president of Harvard University, and Wilhelmus Beekman, an early lieutenant-governor of New York are also among her ancestors.

The young man who now can refer to the beauteous Betty as "my wife" is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson McConnell of Montclair, N. J.

TROOPS CALLED IN MILK WAR

Milwaukee, May 17 (AP)—A crisis in the Wisconsin milk strike appeared imminent today as the state sent more than 1000 National Guards, acting as deputy sheriffs, into the field to combat pickets who said thousands of "farmers would arise" to close cheese factories, condensers and creameries.

Adjt.-Gen. Ralph M. Immell, who said he was desirous of a showdown today, concentrated his forces in two sectors—Shawano County in the north and counties comprising the Milwaukee milk shed. Likewise, pickets were massing in those areas.

Advised that extensive shipments of milk were planned in the Milwaukee milk shed today, the sheriffs of Ozaukee, Waukesha, Racine and Milwaukee Counties made plans for protecting trucks.

M'DONALD LOUD IN PRAISE OF MESSAGE

London, May 17 (AP)—A monument which the future will regard as a great landmark in the march of human progress was the evaluation by Premier MacDonald of President Roosevelt's plea to the nations of the world.

He hailed it as such last night at a dinner of the Pilgrims Society, at the same time indicating no reserve in his estimate of the value of the President's declarations. On the contrary, he gave the impression that it was fully in accord with his own ideas.

Mr. Roosevelt's suggestions and the general situation in connection with the disarmament crisis will be considered by the cabinet today.

DISAPPOINTING TO SOME

It was apparent, however, that the message was disappointing in some circles, where it was expected the President's pronouncements would contain some concrete undertaking in the direction of definite action to prevent European conflicts.

"America has boldly and openly cut her moorings and has launched herself in full sail, with courage and with fine determinations, into new waters," MacDonald said at the dinner.

"Henceforth America, by her own declaration is to be indifferent to nothing that concerns the peace of the world."

He hurled a challenge at critics in Great Britain by declaring that he and his cabinet colleagues intend to adopt all means at their disposal to further conciliation in Europe.

WARNING TO HITLER

Without mentioning him by name, the Premier warned Chancellor Hitler of Germany against any threat to European peace in his speech before the Reichstag today.

Some of the complainants against the Roosevelt declaration seemed to hold that the President went no further than the Kellogg pact and that it was unlikely to prove more effective than the latter has been in checking armaments.

World Opinion Not Yet Shown Effective

—By GILBERT SELDES

GILBERT SELDES

When the Declaration of Independence was written the signers confessed that "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind" required them to give some explanation of their course. And they did it in memorable language.

This decent respect for the opinion of others has grown, in a hundred and fifty years, into an overwhelming honor to what we think of as the good will of the world—an international judge, sitting without a court, handing down opinions in newspapers or on placards carried in mass meetings—a really formidable public opinion. And recent events have made me wonder how, and how well, it works. Looking back, I seem to recall that the opinion of mankind were not exactly favorable to the course of England in South Africa before and during the Boer War. Nor did the world at large applaud the French Government in its handling of the Dreyfuss case; the militarism of pre-war Germany was condemned not only by Germany's rivals, but by people like ourselves, who were outside the range of European warfare—at least we thought we were; the massacres at Kishineff brought no cheers for Russia; and Europe, when it expressed itself at all, was more on the side of Sacco and Vanzetti and Mooney than on the side of Massachusetts and California.

In that list of massed international sentiments you can pick out only one instance in which public opinion was in the slightest way effective—the Dreyfuss case, and even there it is likely that the feelings of England and America were chiefly useful in bolstering up a strong movement among the French themselves to give justice to Dreyfuss. The British in South Africa, the Germans and the Russians at home carried on in their appointed courses, and the collapse of Kaiser and Czar came years after the world had condemned them and for other reasons.

A year ago world opinion was hostile to Japan in its war with China, the only marked change now is that the world seems too preoccupied with its own affairs to trouble very much—and that French newspaper opinion has, under some pressure, veered about. World opinion has changed in regard to Soviet Russia for a number of reasons; but it was not the cry of hatred that softened the Bolsheviki heart and introduced a new economic policy; and world opinion has expressed itself almost officially, in contempt of Hitlerism, but it has not changed Germany.

Does It Exist?

There are half a dozen deductions from this handle of facts and none of them is any too pleasant for those who hope that the decency of human beings throughout the world can ever be counted on to prevent whatever outrage any individual country may choose to perpetrate. Even the most solid body of internationalists in 1914—the Socialists—split into hostile fragments the moment the war broke out. Today an ancient war cry sounds again: the word "Hun" is applied to a German—although it happens to be Hitler—by an English newspaper. And the opinion of mankind, which in 1918 was so clamorous for peace, can be stampeded in three days' time into a new war.

Mr. Seward Collins courteously informs me that the article he is publishing by Mr. Allen Tate—a modest proposal for eliminating some 10 million workers and their families—was written a year ago—at about the time I made a similar proposal in this place. Mr Tate writes savagely with Swiftian satire, and his proposal comes after he has examined all others. That we should have hit on the same solution of our difficulties is pure coincidence. And I still think my own plan was better.

For, if I remember, I leaned toward refrigeration—suspension of activity—rather than outright execution. The difficulty I saw was in what we had a vast population which suffered because it found no work; if they could sleep a year or two the rest of us would go to work, get pay and slowly restore prosperity. (This was all pre-Roosevelt, of course. No one would dream of such a simple scheme now.) Then, when times were better, as soon as we needed an iceman or an architect, we could take him out of the refrigerating plant, thaw him into animation and put him to work.

RICH MAN AND NURSE ELOPE

Worcester, May 17—Elopement of George I. Rockwood, 60, retired manufacturer, with a 32-year-old nurse who cared for his late wife for several years was revealed today in a marriage return to City Hall.

Rockwood was wedded to Miss Gladys Outhouse, formerly of Nova Scotia, in a ceremony in Chatham last Saturday. Rockwood maintained a summer home in Harwichport, near Chatham.

Rockwood's wife died two months ago after several years of illness that made her a semi-invalid. His present bride cared for her until the end and then stayed at the Rockwood home as a housekeeper.

ROME PUZZLED BY PEACE PLEA

Rome, May 17 (AP)—Official circles were uncertain today whether President Roosevelt's message was a definite proposal and therefore demanded a formal answer accepting or rejecting it, or whether it was the expression of an attitude requesting a similar expression from Italy.

The official text had not yet been received, it was said, and the government was reserving any answer until it examined the message in detail. A reply cannot be expected until after the meeting Saturday night of the Fascist grand council.

What Are You Going to Do About It?

EVERY intelligent citizen knows that the country must be freed of racketeers.

Every patriotic citizen wants to help—and the patriotic citizens are numbered by the millions.

But they are unorganized—and because they are unorganized, their patriotism is ineffective.

What can these good citizens do? The Crusaders, who have declared relentless war on the racketeers, have answered that question.

Wherever racketeering exists, says Fred G. Clark, commander-in-chief of the Crusaders, it exists in collusion with corrupt politics, which is itself a form of racketeering.

For that reason, the Crusaders are enrolling good citizens in their ranks from coast to coast—so these citizens may make themselves effective against the POLITICAL racketeers who enable the other racketeers, in so many instances, to thrive and cheat the law.

As the Crusaders themselves have said:

What are YOU going to do about it?

BURY TORRENCE AS FILM OPENS

New York, May 17 (AP)—Funeral services took place today for Ernest Torrence, whose last motion picture had just opened two miles downtown in the garish hurly-burly of mid-town Broadway.

The services began at 10:30. In the Church of the Heavenly Rest an hour after the doors had swung open for the New York premier of Torrence's last movie in a motion-picture house, at 49th st. and Broadway.

The service today was conducted by Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington. After cremation the ashes were to be sent to California.

Torrence rose to movie fame in "Sable David" and "The Covered Wagon." His last role was in "Over the Waterfront," which ended hole today.

More Troops Sent to Vermont Strike

Barre, Vt., May 17 (AP)—The machine gun unit of the 172d Infantry, Vermont National Guard, was enroute to Barre today from St. Johnsbury for duty in the granite strike area.

The company of 47 men and three officers, armed with riot guns and night sticks, left St. Johnsbury in trucks in compliance with orders received during the night. They will augment several National Guard companies already on duty.

Salient Points in Hitler's Demand for Armaments

Berlin, May 17 (INS)—Some of the most important statements in Chancellor Hitler's speech today follow:

"All our troubles originated with the Treaty of Versailles."

"New application of force would only lead to disturbance of the balance of power in Europe and dislocation of the existing order."

"Germany wants to prevent a forceful solution (of the world chos by sincere co-operation. Inner political aims do not harm other nations."

"We have no desire to Germanize others but we will defend ourselves if others try to de-Germanize Germans."

"Germany has disarmed beyond reason. She has a moral claim upon the Allies to fulfill their obligations under the treaties.

"Germany's one wish is for peace and independence."

"As long as the others are unwilling to fulfil their treaty obligations Germany must be conceded at least equality.

"Germany is sincerely thankful for the plan of President Roosevelt. Germany is ready to cooperate as world reconstruction is impossible without disarmament."

"Germany has no aggressive aims. She is ready to join in any new non-aggression pact."

"She (Germany) is ready to recognize the United States as a guarantor of peace."

"Germany will never ratify an agreement eternalizing her defamation. As a cons antly defamed nation we would no longer be a member of the League of Nations."

"Since the treaty (of Versailles) was signed there have been 227,000 men, women and children suicides in Germany."

"This generation suffered too much fro mthe insanity of our times to intend to visit the same upon others."

BANKER JAILED IN R. I. THEFT

Providence, M ya17 (INS)—Ernest Grenier, 57, chief clerk of the State branch of the Industrial Trust Company in Pawtucket, today pleaded guilty in Federal Court to an indictment charging him with misapplication of $12,000 of the bank's funds.

He was sentenced to five years in the Federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., by Federal Judge Ira Lloyd Letts.

While Grenier, who is the father of four children, was being sentenced, police began a search for Basil K. Major, 40, assistant manage of the Wickford branch of the same bank, who was indicted by a Federal grand jury on a charge of misapplying $14,000

It was learned that the amount which Grenier allegedly misapplied was $66,000 over a period of 11 years.

2 MEN PLUNGE THIRTY FEET

James Pinkham, 22, of 115 Locust st., and Chester Goodwin, Jr., of 3 Ocean View av., both of Winthrop, fell 30 feet from a staging today and were taken to the Winthrop Community Hospital suffering from internal injuries.

They taging broke and Pinkham fell to the lawn. Goodwin landed on John eMtcalf, a carpenter working below. Metcalf escaped injuries and broke Goodwin's fall.

JAPS MAY BALK PEACE PLAN

Washington, May 17 (INS)—President Roosevelt's proposal for a world peace pact today encountered its first major obstacle in the threat of Japanese refusal to adhere without reservations.

Japan's probable demand for reservations became known following a visit to the State Department of Katsuji Debuchi, the Japanese ambassador.

How the World Receives U. S. Message

President Roosevelt's appeal for disarmament has met with almost universal approval in world capitals, the only discordant note coming from Japan.

GERMANY—Welcomes the President's initiative, believing it will inspire the Geneva disarmament conference to genuine efforts in behalf of arms limitation.

FRANCE—Professes to see in Roosevelt's appeal a definite warning to Hitlerite Germany that she must not rearm, and saw no criticism at all of the French military establishment.

Great Britain—Delighted at Roosevelt's acceptance of the disarmament plan of Premier MacDonald, and King George himself will express his approval in a message to the American President.

Italy—Unofficially stated nation will approve Roosevelt's proposals in toto.

Japan—Military circles object to approval of the MacDonald disarmament plan, also to the President's plea for an agreement against invasion, citing abnormal conditions in China.

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO REDUCE 15 POUNDS IN MONTH?

Lose Double Chin, Chubby Hips, Bulging Waist—at Same Time Feel Younger, Enjoy Better Health and Increase Physical Charm.

There's no excuse in this modern age of progressive, scientific discovery for any woman—regardless of age—to stay fat, unattractive and lacking in pep. A half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts first thing every morning in your coffee or hot water—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—has helped thousands of fat folks all over the world to regain not only chic slenderness, but superb daily health as well. If one jar doesn't joyfully convince you that YOU, too, can be benefited—money back.

To correct surplus fat it's necessary to employ such treatment as will establish proper and normal body functioning and this is just what Kruschen does—why it's so successful.

Headaches, indigestion, acidity, flatulence and shortness of breath stop as moving you—life takes on a new bright outlook. You feel years younger and look it. Each day you grow more ambitious—full of vigor as unhealthy fat leaves and enviable slenderness takes its place.

A jar lasts 4 weeks and costs but a trifle at any druggists. But for your health's sake—make sure you get Kruschen—it's the SAFE way to reduce.

Mrs. Ethel Donnelly of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "In 46 days I took off 15 lbs. with Kruschen and feel marvelous. The greatest feeling of all was to buy a size 38 dress for before taking Kruschen I could hardly get into a size 44."

SIX MEN MUST PAY $45,000 IN RUM CASE

The cases of six men found guilty of liquor conspiracy, which caused delays and confusion in federal court, were finally disposed of today when Judge James A. Lowell took time from his vacation to re-sentence them.

Wearing a boutonniere, Judge Lowell appeared at Federal court today and in his lobby reimposed his original sentences, with the "grummed" fines still "hitched" to the probation.

Abraham J. Moss of Brookline and Chicago, and Wilfred J. Gauthier and Guida E. A. Carbone of Brookline were fined $10,000 each. Fines of $000 each were imposed on Samuel N. Davidson and Thomas E. Marcello, both of Providence, and Frank E. Ficarra of Cleveland. With the fines went suspended sentences of three years each, to be served if the fines are not paid within five years.

An appeal, taken from the original sentences imposed by Judge Lowell on Feb. 13, was unsuccessful and the defendants were scheduled to appear May 10 for re-sentencing.

When Moss, Gauthier and Farrell failed to answer to their names their attorney said they were flying to Boston from Chicago but their plane was forced down.

Capias writs were then issued, but on aMy 12 the missing defendants were on hand. However, another delay ensued. Judge Morton, who heard the appeal of Asst. U. S. Atty. Elihu Stone and Probation Officer Richard M. McSweeney that the men had violated the terms of their probation in not paying the fines imposed by Judge Lowell, said:

"I can't do anything whatsoever. You have gummed the fine by hitching it on the probation. I am sorry, but the case must stand back until the judge who imposed the sentences and fines comes here."

PREMIERE

Thrilling Romance of Hollywood Today

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

At the premiere of her latest motion picture, Leni Luneska, beautiful star, is stunned by the appearance of her jailbird husband, whom she married in Vienna when only 14. He insists upon recognition as her husband and waits in a private office of the theater for her to reconsider her refusal. Lucky Cavanaugh, handsome gambler, who fell in love with Leni on sight that evening, tries to make Kruger leave. Kruger empties his gun at Cavanaugh without effect, then rushes into the next office in a rage. He surprises burglars looting a safe and is shot dead. Cavanaugh slips out unnoticed, but meets Detective Tom Mulrooney in the hall. His quiz brings out the stories of Leni and Cavanaugh, with reservations on the latter's part.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

FOR A FRACTION of a second Cavanaugh hesitated. "Yes."

"You knew he meant harm to Miss Luneska—blackmail or something?

"Nothing was said about blackmail."

Mulrooney sighed. "All right—we'll drop that for a minute. Now about the safe robbery. What do you know about that?"

"Not a thing in the world."

"I've been in this detective business so long that it becomes natural for me to know when a man is lying," Mulrooney stated in a relaxed voice. "You don't fool me, Cavanaug... You're a gambler and you've been a pretty close friend of a lot of the boys on the wrong side of the law. Probably you've been mixed up in a few deals yourself. But you've never been in a serious spot like this before with murder and burglary hanging over your head. In a way you're sort of an amateur—no offense intended—and you're mixed up with a very beautiful woman, but you're not fooling me. You wouldn't fool the district attorney and you wouldn't fool a jury."

There was no quick and easy answer to the detective's homely wisdom. A new thought flashed upon Cavanaugh.

"I don't think I'll say anything farther until I talk to my lawyer," he announced.

Again Mulrooney shook his head disapprovingly. "That's doing it the hard way," he put forth. "You take the attitude that I'm your enemy. I'm not. I can throw you in jail and pour it on you tough—but I don't see how that would help you any, if you're innocent. I'm not trying to get you in trouble—I'm trying to get you out of trouble."

Something of Cavanaugh's old aplomb came back at this and he smiled. "Staring a revolution in the police department?" he inquired.

"No—just trying to save trouble all around," Mulrooney explained. "You think I'm sap enough to try to hang this job on innocent people. Not on your life. We got trouble enough already trying to convict crooks without trying to send honest people to prison."

"Wait a minute! This man's a detective. He's not your friend—he's not anybody's friend. He's in a different kind of business. He'll take what you tell him and twist it around—"

"Wait a minute—please!" Again Mulrooney made the traffic officer's signal with his hand. "You oughtn't say harsh things like that about me. I'm trying to be nice to you folks but you're making it awfully tough for me, Cavanaugh. Just settle down in your chair and act like home folks. Keep right on talking, Miss Luneska."

Leni turned her vivid eyes upon Cavanaugh.

"Please sit down, dear," she said quickly. "Our fate has passed out of our own hands. I'm too tired to keep up pretenses any longer. It's not worth the struggle. Listen, Mr. Mulrooney."

In a low voice that throbbed now and again with violin tones Leni Luneska for the second time that night began the dreary rehearsal of her life with Karl Kruger. She had told everything to Lucky Cavanaugh and now she was repeating it all to Mulrooney.

Her recital opened like the pages of a tragic book. Cavanaugh, listening, lost all trace of apprehension on his own account. The beating of his heart was simply from pity. More than anything else he wanted to take Leni into his arms—to shield her as he would a child. A hot resentment burned in his breast against himself. Life was a rotten business to hurt a woman like Leni Luneska. Even a dog deserved better treatment!

VAGUE EXPRESSION

Mulrooney listened with a vague expression on his face that might have meant sympathy—or satisfaction. When she had finished he turned his unclouded eyes upon Cavanaugh.

"I wonder," he said thoughtfully, "if you're as game as this little woman has been? It takes a lot of nerve to lay all the cards on the table."

Leni was back in her chair, the opera cloak once more enfolding around her shoulders. At last she was really still. The vibrations were stopped. The violin was silent.

There was no point now. Cavanaugh realized, in concealing anything further from Mulrooney. What he had to tell was a mere formality. The real struggle would come later.

Yet in one detail he found it impossible to tell the whole truth. He did not betray Slug—the man who had given him the jimmy and directed him to the penthouse upon the roof. Only in the matter of identification, however, did he hold anything back.

"What was the name of the fellow that gave you the jimmy?" Mulrooney pressed him.

Cavanaugh's lips were grim. "I don't really know, I know perhaps a hundred chaps of this type without knowing their names."

"Could you identify him?"

"Possibly—but I'm not sure about that."

Mulrooney waived the point.

"Whether you've told me the truth or not, Cavanaugh, you're in a tough spot," he said seriously. "We could come pretty close to sending you to prison for a long stretch. We probably could not convict Miss Luneska as an accessory, but if this even came out in the newspapers she'd be dead as a mackerel in the pictures. I don't like the responsibility."

"What responsibility do you mean?" asked Cavanaugh, his eyes clouded.

SORRY FOR BART

"The responsibility of ruining a woman's life and sending you to jail," replied Mulrooney sternly. "I'm sorry for both of you, but sympathy is not in my department. With me it's a matter of routine duty. My job calls for taking you both down to headquarters and booking you on felony charges."

Cavanaugh could not tear his eyes away from the man's face. It was an actual fact that he was not thinking about himself but about Leni Luneska. As nearly as possible for a human being he had put self-interest out of his mind.

Does Mulrooney's kindness of heart prevent him from arresting Leni and Cavanaugh on the spot? Tomorrow's interesting installment will tell.

CROCKER, 3RD, TO WED JUNE 9

Alvan Crocker, 3rd, grandson of the late Alvan Crocker, millionaire Fitchburg paper manufacturer, obtained a marriage license in Fitchburg city hall today to wed Miss Nancy Ladd, debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter E. Ladd of Hinckley ed., Milton.

The wedding will take place on June 9 at Trinity Church with Bishop Sherrill officiating.

Crocker gave his age as 23 and his fiancee's as 19.

Crocker is a graduate of Harvard, '32, and is attending Harvard Business School. He is a member of the A. D. Club, Hasty Pudding and the Tennis and Racquet Club.

Miss Ladd attended Milton Academy and the Foxhollow School at Rhinebeck, N. Y. She is a member of the Chilton Club, Vincent Club and Junior League.

Crocker's father, Alvan rocker, Jr., was killed while serving with the French Army during the World War. He happened to be in France with his family when the war broke out and after sending them home, joined the French forces.

8 AMERICANS TO MEET QUEEN

London, May 17 (AP)—Mrs. Ray Atherton, wife of the American charge d'affaires, will present eight American debutantes at a patrons tonight at the third court of the season at Buckingham palace. Several hundred British women also will curtsey to the queen.

The court will be deprived of the king's presence as it was last week, due to his rheumatism.

No cars will be allowed to enter the palace gates before 7 p. m., which will reduce the period the women must wait before the palace doors were opened. The presentees last week waited three hours.

The Americans to be presented tonight are Miss Peter Arrangton, Washington, N. C.; Mrs. Hugh Bullock and Miss Juliet Kaufman, of New York City; Miss Virginia Kent, Ardmore, Pa.; Miss Mary Henderson Osborne, Chicago; Miss Katherine Lahm Parker, Fort Sheridan, Ill.; Miss Audrey Warren Pearl and Miss Margaret Wall, Washington, D. C.

N. H. Solons Protest Lighthouse Change

Washington, May 17 (AP)—A resolution of the New Hampshire Legislature, protesting against lowering of the standard of the lighthouse station at Portsmouth, N. H., has been presented to the house by Representative Rogers (D.) Massachusetts. An unattended light has been placed at the station and the fog bell there has been eliminated.

DAILY TRUE STORY -:- A Slight Error

A GIRL FRIEND first told Ellen about the picture. She telephoned and said: "Why didn t you tell me you were engaged to Harry?"

"But I'm not," Ellen replied. "Who said I was?"

"It's in the paper," the friend replied. "You know those pictures they take sometimes of people walking on the beach front. Well, there's one of you and Harry walking together and underneath it says that you are engaged."

A moment later, Ellen hung up and picked up the morning paper, which she hadn't yet read. Her friend had told her the truth. The picture was there, all right, and underneath it she read:

"Among those enjoying the bright sunshine on the beach front yesterday were Miss Ellen Towers and Mr. Harry Waldron, who have recently become engaged."

PRONES HARRY

Ellen's first thought was to call the newspaper and demand retraction. Then she decided to make Harry do it, such things being better handled by men. She phoned Harry.

"Yes, I've just seen it," he said, "I'll be right out."

When Harry arrived at Ellen's home he looked at the picture again and said: "After all, it's only a slight error. We can easily straighten it out."

"That's what I want you to do," replied Ellen. "You call the paper and make them print a retraction. It's bad enough as it is—having everybody think I'm engaged."

Harry looked at her for a moment before replying and then he said, "Is there any reason why you can't be? I mean, you know I'm crazy about you. I've asked you before to marry me. Won't you let's go at it?"

But Ellen shook her head. "No," she said, "not that way. I want them to print a retraction."

PLEAS FAIL

Harry pleaded but to no avail. He looked up the number in the phone book and called the newspaper office and asked to speak to the editor in charge. He told who he was, explained what had happened and demanded a retraction. Then he listened for a moment.

"There's no necessity for doing that," he finally said. He hung up the receiver.

"No necessity for doing what?" asked Ellen, who had been intently listening to the conversation.

"The editor said he was going to fire the photographer who sweared. "He said the photographer had been with the paper for a long time and was a married man but they wouldn't stand for mistakes which made retractions necessary. I certainly feel sorry for him."

"But I don't want him fired," said Ellen. "I don't want to be responsible for a man losing his job in times like these."

"There's only an alternative," said Harry. "That's to call them back and say we don't want the retraction."

He took her hand and then put his arms about her.

"Won't you do it, Ellen?" he asked. "Won't you let me call them and tell them we are engaged—that the mistake was on my part. I've been trying for months to make you say yes. Won't you, now?"

"I don't want to see that man lose his job—well—I do care a lot for you—maybe—"

Ellen hesitated, but that was enough for Harry. She was in his arms and unable to talk any more.

It was half an hour later before he thought of calling the newspaper again and it was several hours after that when he left Ellen's home as an engaged man. He hastened to a telephone booth in a corner store and made a call.

"This you, Steve?" he said over the phone. "Well, it worked," Harry listened for a moment and then went on.

"I know you took a chance on your job, but would do that for a friend, wouldn't you. After all, it was the best picture you ever took."

A FRIEND IN NEED

The Steve on the other end said something which broke in on Harry's words. Then he continued:

"But there wouldn't have been," he said. "If Ellen had made a complaint to your paper I would have told her the truth and would have told your editor the truth. I'll tell Ellen some day, not now. She doesn't know that when I called the newspaper office I held the hook down. And she doesn't know that I put you up to putting that picture in the paper saying we were engaged. She thought you were going to lose your job."

Again Steve said something and Harry listened.

"Sure," said Harry in answer. "It would have been tough luck if that phone had rung while I was pretending to call over it. But a man has to take some chances."

STRAWBERRY FEATHER CAKE WITH FLUFFY FROSTING

1 jar heavy cream.
3 egg whites.
½ cup water.
1 teaspoon almond extract.
2 cups pastry flour.
1½ cups sugar.
3 teaspoons baking powder.
Pinch salt.

Beat egg whites till stiff, but not buttery. Mix the two and fold in the water mixed with the flavoring. Mix and sift dry ingredients all together three times and add gradually to the first mixture. Combine gently, but thoroughly and bake in layer cake tins at 325 for 20 minutes, or until firm, but not brown. Makes three nine-inch layers, or two large ones. Put together with this frosting:

2 cups granulated sugar.
Pinch salt.
3 egg whites.
¼ cup crushed strawberries.

Boil sugar and water together (first stirring until no sugar crystals can be seen) until the syrup spins a long threat (240 F.). Add salt to egg whites and beat until they will stand in points. Then gradually add the hot syrup and the crushed strawberries, well drained. Beat until right to spread.

MRS. WILLIAM C. COX WAS ELECTED president of the Vincent Club for a third term at the annual business meeting held at The Country Club in Brookline yesterday . . .

In an unpretentious and quiet manner, Mrs. Cox has won her way into the hearts of the members, which speaks well for her personal popularity and executive ability . . . long may she reign!

ELIZABETH SOULE

For the other officers, the club members elected an entirely new slate . . . Mrs. George L. Batcheldor, Jr., received the place as first vice-president . . . Miss Barbara Reynolds was chosen for second vice-president . . . Helen Homans was elected treasurer and Mrs. William Davis Taylor will be the new secretary . . .

On the executive committee are a number of old-timers . . . Mrs. J. Gardiner Flint, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr., Edith Parker, Elizabeth Soule, Cecily Livermore as well as three newcomers, Jane Bancroft, Lucy Rantoul and Josephine Emery.

The day was perfect for the wearing of new spring costumes and the Vincent Club members appeared very smart indeed as they jumped out of their shiny motor cars and went into the dear old Country Club for luncheon . . .

Among the first to arrive was Miss Ellen Cushing, who drove up with her fiance Mr. Francis R. Welch, who called for her after the luncheon was over . . . Miss Cushing wore a trig brown costume with darker brown hat as she chatted with her sister, Mrs. Charles L. Hibbard, Jr., in blue with short squirrel cape . . .

Mrs. Cox was attired in a gray and white leaf print silk with dark hat trimmed with yellow flowers . . .

* * *

Sporty Yellow and Brown

BARBARA REYNOLDS WORE THE NAVY BLUE of the mode . . . she is a jolly person with personal charm and experienced in the ways of club life, having been an officer of the Junior League for several years . . .

Mrs. George L. Batcheldor, Jr. (Katherine Abbott), was in a sporty yellow and brown tweed with matching cape . . .

Also in yellow and brown but of the crepe type, Miss Helen Homans' frock was very smart and becoming . . .

We caught pretty Kitty Talbot on the links with her golf bags in a blue and white sport dress . . .

Popular Edith Parker wore the gray and red which is so very smart this spring . . . in gray also was Lucy Rantoul and Mrs. Robert Ogden . . .

* * *

Ellen Pierce in Red Tweed Coat

OTHERS NOTED IN THE LARGE CROWD which thronged the dining rooms of The Country Club were Ellen Pierce, in a red tweed coat with silver fox scarf . . . Miss Pierce, is a headliner with us, she is always so agreeable and pleasant to meet.

Mary Jane Sears was distinque in a blue suit with broad brimmed white hat . . . one of the smartest costumes seen there.

Another decidedly pretty girl was Georgette Binney, a debutante of this season, whose lipstick red tweed coat and scarf with dark brown hat was more New York than Boston . . .

To the contrary, Olga Monks looked every inch sedate Boston in black crepe with crisp organdy collar and cuffs . . . we scarcely recognized her without the Spanish mantilla . . .

Good looking Harriet White sauntered in with appropriate sport attire for a Country Club luncheon . . . yellow and brown checked skirt and scarf and dark brown coat and hat . . . she is decidedly attractive in any costume.

* * *

Two-Tone Brown Ensemble

MARY BIRD WAS EFFECTIVE in a two-tone brown ensemble . . . Miss Bird will no doubt be in the bridal procession for her cousin, Miss Bass, when she is married in September . . .

Katie Johnson looked gay in blue with red plaid organdy blouse, and Greta Erickson reflected her also in the navy tones . . .

Elizabeth Scaife looked well in the dark grey tones, and Leslie Blake was snappy (as always) in light green tweeds with black and white cape, quite outstanding.

Lowell House hosts are having a shipwreck party on Friday night we hear . . .

The Junior League Glee Club members are having an all day picnic at Nahant on Friday . . .

Miss Helena Thompson will be hostess on Friday, May 19, at a luncheon in honor of Miss Jean Lamont Proctor, whose marriage will be the following day . . . Miss Mary Cleveland gave a shower for the bride-to-be on May 11 and Mr. and Mrs. William Buttrick, with their daughter, Mrs. Clifford Castle, Jr., are entertaining for the bridal party at a buffet supper on the night before the wedding.

Robert Delaney, a member of the faculty of the Concord Summer School of Music, has just been awarded the Pulitzer Prize in music for his work "John Brown's Song," (taken from Benet's John Brown's Body), that was first heard at the school two years ago.

THE ANNUAL DINNER meeting of the Harvard Club of Concord takes place this evening at the Concord Country Club. The honor guest on this occasion will be Charles Francis Adams, who will give an address. Prof. Harlow Shapley will also be a guest.

THE ANNUAL SPRING Frolic of the Concord Players will be held on May 22 this year at the Veterans Building. There will be a supper followed by an entertainment.

MISS PRISCILLA PHELAN will be the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton given by Mrs. Walter M. Evatt of Brookline, whose daughter, Miss Marjorie Evatt, will be married June 15, in the Leslie Lindsey Memorial Chapel, to Dr. John Lesh Jacobs of New York. Among the guests attending this luncheon will be Miss Rose Stearns, Miss Lydia Fuller, Miss Jean Fuller, Miss Jane S. Smith and Miss Evatt. The party will go to the Plymouth to see "Alien Corn."

Barn Dance for Jane Bogardus

About 125 young people have been included among the guests invited by Mrs. Hamilton Edwards for the barn dance she is giving in honor of Miss Jane Bogardus next Saturday at her Swampscott estate.

In connection with this event there will be a progressive dinner, shared by Miss Bogardus, the honor guest; Miss Mary Brown, daughter of the Carroll R. Browns of Swampscott, and Miss Leonora Kimball, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kimball, all debutantes of the late season.

Mr. Thomas B. Gannett of Harvard is having a house party at his parents' home in Milton and will take his guests, Miss Bridget MacBurney, Miss Barbara Van Dyke and Miss Mary L. Foss, all from out of town, also Miss Lydia Fuller, Miss Elizabeth Reece, Miss Mary E. Cooper, and several others, over to Swampscott for the dance.

Latest Notes of Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

AT THE BEAVER COUNTRY DAY SCHOOL seventh annual concert, which a delightful group attended, we saw Miss Eleanor Little in a dainty spring print with organdie flowers to match and wearing a brown top coat.

Miss Camilla Olsap was smart in a dark blue, a modish hat and dainty white trimmings. Miss Alsop is always well garbed. Her mother, Mrs. Frances Alsop, is an expert in chic models . . .

Miss Marie Haffenreffen was lovely in a brown figured frock with a brown lapan coat, very smart on her. Miss Beth Moyer also wore brown which was attractive with her golden hair curled low in her neck. Mrs. Thomas Grey of Kennard rd., Brookline, whose daughter, Miss Janet Grey, took a prominent part in the performance, wore a smart beige outfit.

Mrs. Gorham Brooks wore an attractive blue and white dotted Swiss set off by an exquisite string of pearls.

Mrs. Harry Murray's blonde hair was attractively coiffured beneath a tiny black toque. She wore a dark coat and beautiful silver fox fur.

Miss Eleanor Lord was lovely in a Nile green and jonquil yellow organdie with a glamourous collar cape that could be taken off revealing a smart costume for evening wear. And the concert was only the beginning of her evening. She was on her way to the Business school dance in Cambridge.

Miss Pauline Lee, a most accomplished young person, was dressed charmingly in white. Her sister, Miss Isabella Lee, was one of this year's debutantes and Miss Pauline will make her debut next fall.

BOOKS---A Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

In a recent number of the New Yorker Edmund Pearson, discussing again the famous Lizzie Borden murder case, which rocked the country forty years ago, tells this priceless anecdote:

"Miss Lizzie, some years after her acquittal, visited two sisters who owned a farm in the country. In her presence these ladies always avoided unpleasant topics of conversation. For instance, keeping in mind the ancient precept of courtesy that in a family in which someone has been hanged one does not speak of ropes, the two ladies always were careful to say nothing about axes or hatchets. Although the Borden murders were undoubtedly committed with a small hatchet, the word "axe" got into the case—probably because of the popular rhyme:

"Lizzie Borden took an axe
And gave her mother forty whacks.
And, seeing then what she had done,
She gave her father forty-one.'

"As Miss Borden and her hostesses walked about the farm one of the sisters pointed to an old shed, tumbledown and decayed. 'Look at that wreck,' she said. 'Tomorrow I'll have Mike pull it down and cart it off.'

"Miss Lizzie's sudden and enthusiastic response made them gasp. She exclaimed:

"'You don't need to get Mike to do it. I could do it now. Gimme the axe!'"

Which reminds me of a clever woman friend who says that she is given to slipping on verbal banana peels. If there is something she should not say, she is bound to say it. Some evil genius guides her to the wrong remark. She remembers the days when she rode a bicycle, and, approaching a rut in the road, she would always say to herself, "I must avoid that rut!" and immediately fall into it.

One afternoon recently she was walking with a man who was out on bail, awaiting trial on a sensational charge. His offense had been a serious one, and there was every prospect of his landing in a Federal prison. So, in their ramble, she chose subjects of conversation as remote from his crime as possible. She spoke of the glorious weather, of dinners they had attended in the old days, of books, theaters, the opera—everything, in fact, which had no bearing on his case. Then, suddenly, she says she knows not why, she heard herself telling of a trip South she had planned, and added:

"You know, I've never been to Atlanta!"

She could have bitten her tongue off; but instead of performing that useless operation to her horror she found herself pointing to a huge building on the opposite side of the street and inquiring:

"You can't fool your foot"

Arch Preserver Shoes

I claim no miracles for Arch Preserver Shoes, in fact, I have been advising Arch Preserver shoes for so many years that claims are unnecessary.

The accomplishments of Arch Preserver Shoes are a matter of record. You will find the evidence of the amazing comfort they bring practically everywhere you find women.

Arch Preserver Shoes have freed thousands of women from bondage to feet—from the imprisonment at home imposed by aching arches, strained muscles, pinched nerves.

Arch Preserver Shoes have exclusive features that for years have been keeping well feet well—and correcting feet that are not quite in normal condition.

Arch Preserver Shoes have a broad rigid steel arch to insure proper weight support. They have a perfectly flat innersole to prevent pinching and crowding of toes. They are fitted according to the heel-to-ball method.

And because Arch Preserver Shoes are designed by master stylists, you never have to choose either style or comfort. Arch Preserver Shoes give you both.

Try a pair. Let the shoes tell the story. Wm. J. Walsh

PERMANENT WAVES MUST HAVE NATURAL LOOK; CRIMPED HAIR MOST UNPLEASANT

By Margaret Matson

THIS IS THE TIME of year when we begin looking askance at our permanents, wondering if they will need renewing in order to withstand the outdoor days of the summer. And how we've changed!

The question is no longer shall I or shall I not get a permanent, but what kind shall I get, when had I better arrange for it, and to whom shall I go. You can remember, as I can, not too many years ago when a new permanent wave on a friend would send a shudder down your spine.

Tight, crimpy waves, as regular as if they had been ploughed in, and without the slightest similarity to the roll-locking natural curls that we all envy and adore. Those were the early days of the permanent—the days when stories used to circulate about how dangerous and painful the process was.

First Experience

I can remember my first experience. I was frightened in the first place, but what nearly finished me was the smiling remark by the operator's assistant that she had had the same sort of wave just the day previously.

If you could have seen her! A dozen waves per inch, and three serpentine curls plastered on her forehead! I can remember telling the operator grandly that if the waves were not large and loose it would be to our "mutual disadvantage." We can laugh at those experiences now. And we should congratulate the people who are responsible for the remarkable progress in the art. For it is an art!

The success or failure of a permanent is not dependant upon the machine but upon the operator. It is he who must judge the hair, determine how much heat, how the hair should be wound, which machine should be used, and all that sort of thing. And some of the best operators are originating new methods of winding, new combinations of machines which give a loose irregular wave over the top of the head, and close, tight ringlets at the ends.

Thus the head looks exactly as if nature had provided the curls. If you are planning to renew your permanent—or get the first one you've ever had—do please heed this advice. It comes not only from me, but from everyone who's had permanents or given them.

The Only Way

Do choose an operator who really knows his business, for that is the only way you can assure yourself that your hair will not be harmed and that your wave will not be unpleasantly crimpy and artificial.

And do have your hair in as healthy condition as possible, for that is quite essential. And you might consult the operator first before you make the appointment to be sure that your hair is the proper length (it will shorten up when the curl is applied) and that your hair is such that a permanent will "take" without any difficulty.

Moping No Aid To Love, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I like a certain boy very much. At the beginning of this year he seemed devoted to me, but now he seems to have dropped some of his affection. As in almost all cases, there is another girl concerned, and I don't know which he prefers. I feel like crying all the time. S. F.

Dear S. F.: In a case of "the other girl" only time will tell. But, in your place, I shouldn't sit around moping and waiting for a sad ending to the romance, if a sad ending it is to be. Cultivate other young friends, go about and have a jolly time. I doubt if any girl ever got a boy friend back with red eyelids and a mouth drawn at the corners.

Says He's a "Greenhorn"

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've never been out with girls—believe it or not—never had a date. I am a sort of prize greenhorn, having been occupied with other things. If you meet a girl by chance, that you'd like to marry, do you know it intuitively? Is there a different feeling when you meet just any nice girl casually. " What would you suggest for a greenhorn—a man who knows absolutely nothing about the femmes? R. L.

Dear R. L.: My first bit of advice is to join a good dancing class. Not any sort of place where they teach you to caper gracefully, but a good one that has a good class of pupils. The wife of one of your business associates ought to be able to steer you in the right direction.

He Fears to Tell Her

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

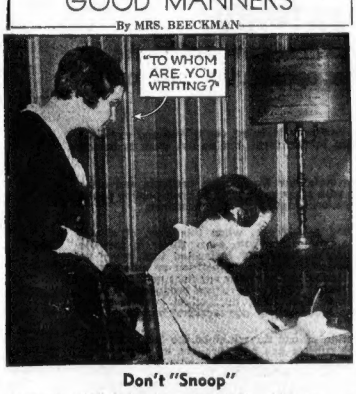
I love a girl very much, but I don't want her to know it yet. My reasons for not telling her are that if I did she'd expect me to ask her to marry me, and I couldn't do that now. I've been loafing for three years, not because I want to loaf, but because I can't find a job. I just sit around and feel desperate.

BILL.

Dear Bill—The other day I heard our President's wife talk brilliantly about making our new leisure count for something. More true of enforced leisure, such as yours, than the unoccupied times which is one of the luxuries of the well-to-do. Instead of sitting around and feeling desperate, Bill, why not use that time to advantage?

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN



Don't "Snoop"

MINDING OUR own business is one of the most difficult things that most of us have to do in life. For most of us are full of curiosity about other people, full of inquisitiveness about their lives and their affairs. And how other people's letters do incite that curiosity.

But it's pleasant for us and for our friends if we conquer those battles with our curiosity. So don't look over people's shoulders while they are writing letters. Don't ask them to whom they are writing, or what they are writing.

The Girl Speaks First

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A club I belong to is equally divided on the correct form of greeting. If a boy and girl meet in a hall at high school, or on the street, who is supposed to say "Hello" first, the girl or the boy? DOROTHY.

There's a very definite rule about this—that the girl is always given the prerogative of being the one to acknowledge acquaintanceship with a boy. In the world of etiquette a boy or a man waits for a girl or woman to bow first, or to speak first, or to first extend her hand for a handshake.

Write in English

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have read that in business letters the use of expressions such as "instant" and "ultimo" should be avoided. A friend contends that such expressions are correct and may be abbreviated, thus: "11th inst." Please tell me if this is correct. I have been taught to avoid abbreviations in letter writing. BUSINESS GIRL.

Don't "mix languages" in your business letters. Use the English equivalents of the Latin words. At the same time, avoid abbreviations. Indicate the month with its right name. Instead of inst. or instant, use the name of the present month. And instead of per use the English equivalent. Don't write per yard or per annum. Say, instead, a yard or a year.

'A DUET'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

This is not Tweedle-dum and Tweedle-dee intoning a stave, but Jill and that Spring-time fellow, Eros, fingering a madrigal for Jack. Spring is outside for these two; for YOU it is raining perhaps under a low gray sky. But not for Jack and Jill and Love. For them the almond blossoms show through the gray curtain in pink flame. For them the thrush sings, as he does indeed for any happy heart with listening ears, through any weather. For them Beauty spreads her skirts like any peacock and trails them over the new grass. Spring's mannequin. For them the uncloudedest sky is always there, superbly blue above dark clouds.

Love, Beauty, Happiness and Music come into one's mind together. "Music is the food of Love." And a heart in love feeding upon music, in its turn, must sing. Without music the world would be a strange, stolid place. As it would be, we all know, without Love.

Have you ever had a mad, sad, restless heart and felt it grow calm and at ease, lose itself on a river of sound, wading ecstatically in sounding color, as if knee deep in violets? That's rather mixed up, but I betcha you know what I mean if music is something in your life, too!

Have you watched two lovers, serenely believing that no one in the world suspects their passion, listening over their food to "Florian's Song" or Schubert's "Serenade"?

"Love makes the world go round," and Music adds its genius finger to make it whirl. Listen and see if "the music of the spheres" is not a Love Song.

Banana Recipe, Economical and Rich

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

YES, IT'S ABOUT DUE—another chat on our good old friend the banana. And I'll guarantee you'll be delighted with the new recipes I have for you, using this luscious, economical fruit food.

Must Be Ripe

You are probably as enthusiastic about bananas as I am—firstly, because nature had presented them in such an attractive, germ-proof package, and next, because the perfectly ripe (brown-speck) banana is such a perfect food even for infants and invalids. My star-athlete son has always had a full quota of bananas in his diet—they're such a valuable source for quick energy because the sugars in a ripe banana are quickly available and an excellent muscle food.

Remember, though, to eat the banana only when it is ripe (with no sign of green on the tip). Cook it and use it as a vegetable when the skin is yellow and the tip is green.

Banana, Peanut Salad

Roll bananas, from which the skins have been peeled, in chopped peanuts, place on a bed of lettuce, and top with a spoonful of mayonnaise. Graham or whole-wheat bread buttered and spread with chopped olives, and glasses of equal portions of chilled grape-juice and ginger ale served with this, make an attractive luncheon and one which boasts many important food elements.

A surprise variation of the Banana and Peanut Butter Salad is made by putting peanut brittle through the food chopper, then sprinkling it thickly over a sliced or quartered banana (first dipped in lemon juice). Serve on crisp lettuce with whipped-cream mayonnaise.

DR. COPELAND ON HEALTH

Value of "Spinal Puncture"

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

MANY PERSONS misunderstand what is meant by "spinal puncture" and are alarmed if it is suggested. There is a popular idea that it is dangerous to have a spinal puncture. But when the procedure and its purpose are explained, they forget their fears.

Dr. Copeland

Spinal puncture is used to aid in the recognition of certain diseases. In some instances it is curative, bringing relief from pain and suffering.

Running through the inside of the spinal column, the back-bone, is a space called the spinal canal. This carries the great nerve, the spinal cord, which is surrounded by more or less fluid.

Spinal puncture is the tapping of the spinal membrane for the purpose of obtaining some of this fluid. A small amount is withdrawn, examined under a microscope and subjected to various tests.

Examination of the spinal fluid is of great value in diagnosing certain disorders. In doubtful cases it may be the only means of actually determining whether or not a patient is suffering from tumor of the brain, tuberculosis of the brain, various forms of spinal meningitis, fractured skull and other disorders.

Fortunately, it is now possible to perform a spinal puncture without pain and discomfort to the patient. I can recall the days when spinal puncture was an uncomfortable procedure. Today, by the aid of local anesthesia, little, if any, discomfort is experienced. The patient may feel the slight pin-prick of the hypodermic needle and perhaps a mild feeling of pain.

Spinal puncture may be performed in the home or at the hospital. It is preferably done at the hospital where all the facilities for the various tests are available.

It is the universal testimony of friends of mine in the profession, men who have made hundreds of these punctures, that no harm results. One famous doctor wrote me as follows: "We have never had any bad results from our spinal punctures and are anxious to extend the benefits of this diagnostic procedure to all in whom it is plainly indicated."

Health Queries

I. K. S. Q—What do you advise for enlarged pores?

A.—Try using hot and cold compresses alternately for 15 minutes night and morning.

Mrs. P. P. P. Q.—Is it harmful to continue cod liver oil during the warm weather? 2—How can I correct poor circulation? 3—I am greatly troubled with gas at times—what would you advise?

A.—Not harmful, but in most cases it is unnecessary to continue through the warm weather. 2—Improve your general health and your circulation will benefit. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question. 3—Watch your diet and keep your system clear.

S. T. Q.—Are peanuts and peanut butter fattening? 2—Are spices fattening? Are they harmful or good for one?

A.—Yes, particularly if taken in any quantity. 2—Not fattening but should be eaten sparingly since they are indigestible.

Use Care With Lipstick

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN FLYING the lipstick use a magnifying mirror. It is the only way to avoid sliding over lip edges or smearing up the white skin surface. Stretch the lips smooth, then the synthetic health coloring won't just touch the high spots, make lips look crepy. Do a fade-out gradually toward the lip ends. Never place a heavy coating on the under lips. That's bad.

WEATHER WE always have with us and there is no kind of weather that doesn't take a bean crack at feminine faces. Cold winds play the complexion, the sun scorches it, so there's no such thing as taking time off from the beautifying chores. When we aren't fighting red noses we are battling freckles; so it goes. And the skin itself all too often has a mind to commit suicide, shuffling off in tiny flour-like flakes. Practically every complexion needs the nightly lubricating with heavy cream or muscle oil. Those skins that have not been affected by birthdays are the ones that have had care.

THE MARRY-GO-ROUND

Marriage Addicts

By HELEN ROWLAND

NOBODY CAN understand in these days why a woman with the marrying habit keeps on dealing herself a new hand, no matter how disappointing all the other hands she has held have been. People are always astonished when a good-looking woman with a good income remarries.

* * *

But there are six big reasons—and lots of minor ones. For while a husband may no longer be regarded as an absolute necessity, he is and always will be an ASSET. The home lacks that finished look unless there is a man around it; and the masculine aroma of shaving soap and good strong tobacco lends it an atmosphere that no dainty spinster's dainty nest can ever have.

* * *

Helen Rowland

One big reason why every woman who has had a husband and lost him wants another is for protection. And the more money she has the more she needs a man to protect her against blue-sky salesmen, fortune hunters, gougers, grafters, professional borrowers and her own foolish impulses. The very SIGHT of a woman with more than 86 cents to her name is more than some men can bear. The magic words, "I'll ask my husband" have saved many a woman thousands of dollars.

* * *

And, last but not least, what every ex-wife misses is the SOUND OF THE KEY IN THE LATCH! Somebody to come home evenings; somebody to wait for; somebody to TELL things to; somebody to laugh with or worry over.

* * *

That's why, no matter how many times a woman has failed at matrimony, she always wants to try again. Marriage is a gamble—and most women are addicts!

'WE DEMAND RIGHT TO LIVE,' THUNDERS HITLER IN ARMS PLEA

NATION WILL FIGHT RATHER THAN BE DISGRACED

even voice, afterward warmed to his subject, especially when he claimed for the new young Germany rights and privileges the same as any other nation.

There were roars of applause when he scathingly detailed his account of the injuries inflicted on Germany by the victors in the war, saying that these facts could not be compensated for by sanctimonious phrases.

BLAMES PEACE TREATY

Hitler ascribed all of Germany's troubles and the woes of the world at large to the Treaty of Versailles, which he said created new wounds instead of healing the old ones.

He lashed out at the security demands of France and the little entente powers.

"France, Poland and Czechoslovakia have thousands of fighting planes, tanks, and poison gases," he said.

"Does not Germany have more right to demand security than her high armed interallied neighbors?"

NO WILL TO FIGHT

"She is ready to sign any new non-aggression pacts and to participate in a joint movement recognizing the United States as the guarantor of peace," he said.

Hitler finished his address at 4:02 p. m. (11:02 a. m. E. D. T.) with a fervent plea for world cooperation.

"May the nations," he said, "find a way to real understanding o nthe basis of equal rights."

The Reichstag immediately passed a resolution endorsing the chancellor's announced foreign policies in full and then joined in singing "Deutschland Ueber Alles."

The theatre was a vast expanse of brown-shirted figures, tense with expectancy, as Hitler came in.

There was one brief salvo of applause as Hitler entered the Opera House. Hitler strode to the tribune, took his place before an immense swastika flag and signalled for silence.

TAKES QUICK CHARGE

The deputies sank into their seats and subsided into absolute silence.

Capt. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, speaker of the Reichstag, stepped forward and opened the session in a few crisp words.

"German men and women," Goering said, "the Reichstag has been summoned in this serious hour to decide the fate of the nation.

"Barely as there been such a fateful hour.

Hardly had Goering's words died out when Chancellor Hitler stepped forward on the tribune and began speaking.

The chancellor read his speech from a manuscript, speaking in an even, clear voice. He wore a white shirt under his brown tunic.

Early in his speech, Chancellor Hitler displayed a conciliatory tone.

"New application of force," he said, "would only lead to disturbance of the balance of power in Europe and dislocation of the existing order."

"NO HARM TO OTHERS"

"New wars, new sacrifices and new insecurity for Germany or its drowning in a Bolshevist chaos would cause unforseeable crises," Hitler continued.

"We have an understanding of the claims of others," he said.

"We have no desire to Germanize others. You can't turn Poles into Germans.

"But we will defend ourselves if others try to de-Germanize Germans.

"Germany has fulfilled her obligations.

"She has disarmed beyond reason.

"She has a moral claim upon the Allies to fulfill their obligations under the treaties.

"Equality has not yet been realized."

Hitler devoted a considerable portion of his address to a review of the existing treaties, starting with the claim that "revision of the treaties was provided by their authors."

"Treaties," he said amidst almost continuous cheers, "should heal wounds and not make new ones.

"It would have been possible to make a treaty acceptable and reasonable to the claims of Poland and one that would still have been bearable to Germany."

Socialists Avoid Reichstag Seats

Berlin, May 17 (AP)—Many Socialist benches were empty spaces when the Reichstag convened to hear Chancellor Hitler. Twenty deputies were still under arrest, nine, including Wilhelm Karl Severing, Philipp Scheidemann and Wilhelm Sollmann, asked leave of absence and a considerable number were sojourning outside of Germany.

The Centrist caucus also showed the absences of men under indictment by the new regime, since Dr. Bruening, leader of the party, had requested them to refrain from exercising Reichstag duties until the courts decided their cases.

In his remarks on the treaty of Versailles itself, Hitler said:

PROBLEMS ECONOMIC

Germany's problems and those of Europe, he said, are largely economic.

"Overpopulation in western Europe and lack of materials comprise the chief source of trouble," he said.

"Instead of reparations, the peace treaties might better have given peoples a chance to live.

"It is not wise to rob peoples of the economic possibilities of existence without taking into account that human beings depending upon them, now as before, exist as a factor demanding the right to live," the chancellor told the hushed Reichstag.

"The idea of rendering service to other people by destroying economically a people of 65,000,000 is so absurd that nobody can dare openly to espouse it."

"Even more absurd was it to try to effect this destruction by methods which, according to the law of cause and effect, sooner or later had to lead the victors into catastrophe."

Turning to the subject of reparations, the chancellor declared:

"Germany fulfilled the imposed obligations despite the lack of sense inherent therein, and the consequences which could be foreseen, with a fidelity that was truly suicidal."

"The international economic crisis is unimpeachable proof of the correctness of this assertion. Europe going under in Communistic chaos would conjure up a crisis in the world's development of unmeasurable proportions and indeterminate duration.

"It is the most solemn wish of the national government to prevent such unpeaceful development by its sincere and active co-operation."

The chancellor explained the National Socialist revolution as contemplating: First, preventing a Communist overthrow; second, leading millions of unemployed back to productive labor; and third, reestablishing the stable authority of government.

These purposes, he said, in no wise contravened the interest of the rest of the world.

"If at this moment I speak consciously as a national socialist," he continued, "I should like thereby in behalf of the national government and of the entire national resurgence to bear testimony that especially we and this young Germany are animated by the deepest understanding for similar feelings and attitudes, as well as the justified claims to live, by other peoples.

AGREES TO DISARM

"German," Hitler continued when a burst of prolonged applause had given him a brief rest, "has willingly taken over obligations beyond the Versailles treaty, the Locarno pact and the Kellogg pact.

"What more obligations are asked?

"Germany is ready at time to take over more obligations.

"She is ready to dissolve her entire army and destroy her arms if the other nations will do likewise.

"Germany does not want any more than she is ready to concede others.

"As long as the others are unwilling to fulfil their treaty obligations, Germany must be conceded at least equality.

"For this, the MacDonald disarmament plan furnishes a possible basis.

"Germany is sincerely thankful for the plan of President Roosevelt.

"She is ready to consent to cooperate, as reconstruction is impossible without disarmament.

"Germany is willing to agree to a five year transitory period to reform her army in accordance with the MacDonald plan, if she is given equality when those five years have passed.

"Germany is willing to renounce her demands for offensive weapons if the other nations destroy theirs.

CRIES FOR SECURITY

Hitler called attention to the steps Germany has taken in behalf of disarmament, such as demilitarization of the Rhineland zone, limitation of the German army and navy and strict military control.

"What security has Germany?" he asked.

"France, Poland and Czechoslovakia have thousands of fighting planes, tanks and poison gases.

"Does not Germany have more right to demand security than her highly armed interallied neighbors?

"But Germany is willing to place her political associations (Nazi Storm Troopers, Steelhelmets, etc.) under control if others do likewise in order to prove they have no military character."

"The German people will live as have the French and Poles. No nation can have more understanding for newly recreated nations than has young Germany."

The chancellor asserted that the Versailles treaty was no solution, nevertheless no German government will of its accord bring about a break of the arrangement which can not be removed without being supplanted by a better one.

"The worst effect of the Versailles division into victors and vanquished is the forced defenselessness of one part of the nation as compared with the exaggerated armaments of others."

He pleaded with the victors that the advantages of the moment are nothing compared with the development of centuries.

GERMANY NOW DISARMED

Germany, France and Poland will continue to exist, he said, and "Germany wants nothing she is not ready to give up to others."

Offering a recapitulation of the arms Germany has destroyed, and asserting that the nation now is disarmed, the chancellor declared:

"It is untrue that the storm troopers of the Nazi party stand in any relation to the Reichswehr and that they constitute militarily trained units of army reserves.

"The storm troops started without any aid or financial support by the State, the Reich or the Reichswehr, and without any military training and equipment, merely for party purposes and needs.

"Their purpose was and is solely the removal of the Communist danger. Their organization is purely for propaganda purposes.

"The Steelhelmets (an order in organization of war veterans) arose from the memory of common experiences in the trenches, for the purpose of fostering the tradition of comradeship and also to protect Germany from Communism.

"The danger of Communism other nations cannot measure. If the statesmen at Geneva claim that these are military units they might as well include also fire departments, Turnvereine, rowing clubs and sports organizations."

EQUALITY AFTER 5 YEARS

Germany is thinking only of security. She will never ratify an agreement eternalizing her defamation."

Hitler called upon the Allies to fulfill their pledges under the Versailles treaty, declaring that Germany had disarmed "beyond reason" and made good her reparations obligations "to the point of suicide."

"Germany," the chancellor said, "is willing to agree to a five-year transitory period to reform her army in accordance with the MacDonald plan, if she is given equality when those five years have passed.

"Germany's one wish is for peace and independence."

"U. S. FOR PEACE RULER"

"Germany has no aggressive aims.

"She is ready to join in any new non-aggression pact. Germany is thinking only of security. She is further ready to join in a joint movement to recognize the United States as a guarantor of peace.

"But Germany will never ratify an agreement eternalizing her defamation. If attempts are made to force such ratification, the world will find that Germany will not budge.

"Germany will not sign her own condemnation.

"Threats of sanctions will only lead to final cancellation of the treaties. Even then we would continue to insist upon our peaceful demands. Responsibility for the ensuing chaos would rest upon the authors of the sanctions.

"Any attempt to assault Germany would only be dictated by an intention to exclude us from the disarmament conference. We have character enough to draw the only possible conclusions if we no longer were welcome as Geneva. As a constantly reframed nation, we would no longer be a member of the League of Nations."

Necks were craned forward as he started to talk. Chiefs of the Reichstag and the navy seated behind the tribune were among the keenest listeners. Upon Hitler's words depended the fate of Germany's military aims.

The former German crown prince, in full uniform; Prince Louis Ferdinand, in civilian clothes, and numerous other dignitaries were among the prominent spectators who assembled in the Kroll Opera House to hear the momentous address.

Also present was Prince August Wilhelm, youngest son of the former Kaiser, who is an enthusiastic Nazi. He wore an ordinary brown shirt uniform, as did the solid block of Nazi deputies who occupied seats in the center of the historic opera house.

It was Hitler's supreme test of statesmanship.

As the responsible head of the government, he had to choose either to revert to a denunciation of the treaty of Versailles, so familiar to all who heard him as agitator for the Nazi party, or try to reconcile himself to world opinion in a manner calculated to assuage feelings abroad.

At the same time he was under the necessity of retaining the confidence of his Nationalist followers at home.

His speech will "build bridges of understanding rather than cut away from Geneva," a high government authority said.

As the government official expressed it, Hitler's words are "practical—not catastrophical."

The Reichstag deputies, the Nazis among them resplendent in their party uniforms, assembled in the Kroll Opera House, which is larger than the regular Reichstag assembly hall, recently gutted by fire.

A capacity gathering was on hand, and even important government officials from the provinces were unable to obtain places.

Many non-Nazi deputies pleaded sickness or absence from the country as an excuse for not attending.

Virtually all Stadthalters and high government officials of the federal states hurried to Berlin to attend the historic Reichstag session. The largest array of diplomats ever seen here together was present when Hitler took the rostrum.

Assuming the defensive the chancellor asked:

"What concrete safeguards does France demand beyond the international obligations already assumed? What safeguards is Germany to have?"

WILL JUNK ARMY

Then, after presenting detailed figures regarding French armaments, he continued:

"Even Germany is ready at any time to assume further obligations of an international nature provided other nations also are ready.

"If the world would only realize," he said, "the disastrous consequences of the Treaty of Versailles. Since the treaty was signed there have been 227,000 men, women and children, suicides in Germany.

HAS VIEWS OF LEADERS

In preparation for the speech Hitler conferred with President von Hindenburg and Count Rudolf Nadolny, chief German delegate to the World Disarmament Conference at Geneva.

Germans of all shades of opinion believes that enemies of the late World War again are closing a circle about the Reich.

Among the points at issue in the world disarmament conference at Geneva between Germany and the other nations is the question of whether to calculate as army effectives organizations such as the Nazi storm troopers. A committee has decided they should be so counted.

Another bone of contention is an article of the British disarmament plan, drawn up by Premier MacDonald, placing the size of the German army at 200,000 men, with France allowed the same number, but an additional overseas force of 200,000.

As Hitler entered his study last night a translation of President Roosevelt's message to the nations was handed him, but he made no comment. He has not consulted the cabinet regarding the pronouncements.

In other official quarters, however, pleasure was expressed at the American declarations. The United States may be abandoning its "ice cold isolation," commentators said.

Officials pointed out that the MacDonald disarmament plan always had been supported by the German delegation.

Europe's Peace at Stake in Hitler's Arms Plea

THE CHIEF GIVES NAZI SALUTE

Organized secretly in a Munich cellar, Germany's Nazis took a few lessons from Mussolini's fascism and formed a semi-military organization that swept Hitler into power several months ago. That date, in the eye of many, has marked the death of the German Republic.

A PLEASANT WORD FOR THE CROWN PRINCE

Still hoping for the restoration of the monarchy, the former German crown prince is prominent in the ranks of the Nazis, whose demands at Geneva may precipitate another European conflict, even in the face of President Roosevelt's insistence that peace must be preserved.

King May Answer Roosevelt Note

London, May 17 (INS)—President Roosevelt's appeal for world peace received such a favorable response in Great Britain that King George may personally reply to the American chief executive.

This was learned today while the British cabinet sat in session to draft the government's official reply.

The cabinet is awaiting word from Buckingham Palace as to whether the King wishes to send it directly to President Roosevelt or dispatch it through Prime Minister MacDonald.

ROOSEVELT PEACE PLEA IS LAUDED BY HITLER

F. D. Is Assailed in Hungary Press

Budapest, Hungary, May 17 (AP)—A violent attack on President Roosevelt by the reactionary opposition newspaper "Uj Nemzedek" featured meager press comment today on the President's proposal.

Referring to Mr. Roosevelt as a "dilettante and international amateur, a romping boy not yet grown up," the paper said he "talks to hunger in the voice of a well-fed person."

The newspaper expressed suspicion that "his message wants to juggle into world opinion that it is provocation to war if a nation wishes even by peaceful means to ask back what it has been robbed of."

Boy, 5, Burned Fighting Blaze

Five-year-old William Martino, of Myrtle st., Watertown, was nursing burned hands today but content in his thoughts that he was a help to his mother. The boy suffered the burns when he ran to the aid of Mrs. Patrick Martino in beating out a small curtain blaze in the Martino home.

The DAMNABLE SWEAT-SHOP and SWEAT-SHOP GOODS are the greatest curses which the depression opened the way for.

Human Misery was and now is being capitalized and exploited by objects in apparent human form, but do not seem to belong to the human race.

Merchants who knowingly buy Sweat-shop products and offer them (usually mixed with other goods) to the unsuspecting public are no better and no more human than the producer.

More than a year and a half ago, when this state of affairs was first brought to public attention, every Buyer in the Ole Fule Stoar was strictly and severely instructed that under no circumstance or condition—to meet competition or otherwise—should he buy one piece of the unsavory rubbish; neither should he buy any of the foreign rubbers or shoes produced by labor receiving a few pennies a day, and dumped in here at prices which would take the bread out of our workers' mouths.

At nearly every meeting of our Buyers since the initial instructions were given, the subject has been brought up and forcibly emphasized that great care should be taken that none of these goods find their way into the stock of any buyers here. Careful—although the temptation might have been great, when they knew competitors were using many of these products. But, they stuck to their manhood, and so far as the writer knows, not one piece of Sweat-shop rubbish, shoes or rubbers from abroad, have ever been offered in this store.

I saw a statement sometime ago from a certain store, stating all their merchandise was produced under healthy, normal conditions—all of which everyone knew was true, knowing the store making the statement would never lower its dignity or self-respect to such abominable methods. Now, let others come forward with a statement disclaiming any and all ways by purchase, sale or otherwise of such so-called merchandise. Kumon now, speak up—the public have a right to know, and "an honest man has naught to fear."

Yours truly,

NAEGELE TELLS OF 'NEGLIGEE' GIFT FROM '$50,000 GIRL'

MANSFIELD TO HURL HAT IN RING FRIDAY

Plans to Announce His Candidacy in Radio Address

Frederick W. Mansfield Boston attorney and a Democrat, will announce his candidacy for mayor in a radio broadcast over local stations Friday evening

Immediately after the announcement a sign urging his election will be erected in Central Square East Boston

It was intended that the announcement should come as a surprise to Boston voters, but details of the plan reached the Boston Evening American today

Atty. Mansfield and his friends are confident he will receive the endorsement of the Good Government Association, which supported him in his unsuccessful campaign against Mayor Curley in 1929.

Should he receive such endorsement he will get much of the support that at present is slated to be thrown to former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, who is also a candidate, political observers say

These observers also say that Mansfield's action in addition to weakening the Nichols forces will place Dist. Atty. William J. Foley and former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, other leading contenders, in a stronger position.

Supporters of Theodore A. Glynn, chairman of the street commission, former fire commissioner, and unsuccessful candidate against Nichols in 1925, say that announcement of the Mansfield candidacy may soon be followed by similar action by Glynn.

JUROR REFUSES TO TESTIFY OF 'FIXING'

Carroll in Appeal to Court Bares Fear of Incrimination

Richard J. Carroll of State [illegible] Revere, one of the jurors whose testimony before a special investigating committee is [illegible] to have caused disbarment proceedings to be brought against Walter B. Keenan, Boston attorney, on the stand again today in Superior Court refused to answer questions

"I refuse to answer on the grounds that it might incriminate me," he declared to every question put to him by Robert Homans, assistant prosecutor of the case. Even when asked if he had received any money from anyone since he testifid bfore th investigating committee, Carroll refused to answer.

He is the second witness against Keenan, charged with jury fixing, who refused to coroborate his alleged testimony before Dunbar F. Carpenter, head of the committee which has been investigating alleged corruption of jurors by Boston attorneys.

JUROR "FRIGHTENED"

Abraham Spillberg, one of the jurors who was alleged to have sold his vote for a meerchaum pipe and $25 in one of the cases tried by Keenan, yesterday testified that he was so frightened when questioned by Carpenter and others, that he could not remember what his testimony had been.

Homans began questioning Carroll when the trial was resumed today in an effort to have him verify a transcript of testimony he was supposed to have given before Carpenter and the investigating committee last February.

Homans appealed to Judge Donahue to require Carroll to answer the questions put to him, but the judge refused to do so

TESTIMONY ON BRIBE

Carroll's alleged testimony before Carpenter showed that Carroll said he was approached by one Sam Harris of Revere in March 1929 who told him there was a chance to make some money if he would return a favorable verdict in a civil suit against the New England Telephone Co.

Harris, it is alleged, was one of the intermediaries said to have been employed by Keenan in attempting to influence a jury in this case.

Ely Warns of Indifference on Repeal

While state printers started to [illegible] off some 2,[illegible] prohibition repeal ballots today, leaders of both political parties opened a drive to turn out a record vote for the special election on June 13.

The ballots will contain only the question of repeal, the matter of [illegible] having reached the stage where it could be presented to the voters. [illegible]

"It all depends upon whether we can arouse the enthusiasm of our people in this fight sufficiently to get them to go to the polls," he said

"Their convictions on this issue are not to be doubted. They have seen the orderly control of government fast slipping away from the regularly-constituted authority mainly because of the farce of national prohibition."

Lieut.-Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon Mayor Curley, Gov. Theodore F Green of Rhode Island, Jouett Shouse, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, James Roosevelt, son of President Roosevelt; Mrs. Elizabeth W. Pickets Accused of Attack on Worker, Man Also Held

Two girl pickets and a man were arrested as [illegible] striking garment workers in angry mood, began the [illegible] of their [illegible] strike [illegible] attempt to close [illegible] [illegible] in the vicinity of Kneeland st.

Mrs. Luba Sacks, 32 of Glendale st., Dorchester and Netta Petoto, 22 of Medford st., Medford, were arrested charged with assaulting Mildren Panton, a garment worker, as she was about to enter a shop in Hollis st

RESCUED FROM STRIKERS

Police fought their way through the milling hundreds crowded about the combatants and rescued Miss Panton who was being scratched and mauled by the irate pickets

Louis Bernstein, who gave his address as Kneeland st. was arrested when he refused to move on order of police

Attempts of manufacturers to import strikebreakers last night were thwarted by pickets, who for the first time in the history of the union, guarded shops all during the night

Sleepy pickets reported to Philip Kramer president of the local of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union which called the strike, that two cars filled with strikebreakers pulled up at a Kneeland st factory shortly after midnight

CHARGE LAW VIOLATIONS

Kramer today alleged that manufacturers were violating the labor laws which apply to women and that they were employing continuation school pupils as strikebreakers

Pianist Back on Stand in Buswell Suit; N. Y. Visit Told

[illegible] Naegele young concert [illegible] with whom Tyyne Niemi, [illegible] fell in love, [illegible] the faces of jurors [illegible] Salem [illegible] [illegible] he testified that [illegible] some handstitched [illegible] when he was [illegible]

[illegible] her former employer H. Leslie Buswell, for $[illegible] on the allegation that she was [illegible] to Danvers Hospital to keep her from embarrassing Naegele with her love

Naegele told of the gift of underwear after a long series of denials, under cross-examination by the girl's attorney, that he ever hugged or kissed Miss Neimi, or played the piano for her, or invited her to his room when he was a guest at Buswell's.

TELLS OF N. Y. VISIT

Atty. James Graham tried to get Naegele to admit he acknowledged the gift of underwear, and wrote that the hand-stitching was so fine it looked as if done by machine, but the pianist denied it

Another exchange that produced smiles in the courtroom came when Graham asked·

"Miss Neimi wasn't as stout in those days, was she?"

"She looks about the same to me," said Neagele

Naegele said that Tyyne caused a commotion at the home of a Mrs. Barclay, a friend of his, in New York She had called on Naegele in New York and he had arranged for her to spend the night at Mrs. Barclay's

"Mrs. Barclay," he said, "told me Tyyne told all the help she was in love with me.

"She upset the whole household and in the midst of it she tried to jump out a window

RETURNED HER GIFT

"The next time I visited Mr Buswell at Gloucester, he told me she had been taken to the state hospital and I told him about wht Mrs. Barclay said. Mr. Buswell asked me if there was anything at ll between us and I told him there was not."

Because of what Mrs. Barclay had told him, Naegele said he returned unopened, a second gift [illegible] Tyyne sent him, at Christmas, 1929. He learend later this was a toilet set

Miss Niemi appeared for a second time as a witness today, to deny that she tried to jump from a window at Mrs. Barclay's home or that she threatened suicide

"Did you ever sit in front of the butler with a kimono on or expose yourself in any way?" her lawyer asked.

"I never did," she said.

"I never did"

Miss Lilian Dunklav, head nurse at Westboro State Hospital, who was in charge of nurses at Danvers when Tynne was taken there, challenged Tynne's earlier statements that the bathtub and bed were not clean

"The night-dress," she added, was of unbleached cotton, naturally darked than silk. She refused to eat for five days, taking only milk. There are two wards for newly admitted cases, one for the noisy and one for the quiet. She was put in the noisy ward."

"You mean the violent ward?" asked Graham.

"Yes," she said.

AID FUND DRIVE READY TO GO

Various committees engaged in the Boston Emergency Relief Campaign, which was renewed Monday, today announced they had completed arrangements for their widespread canvassings.

The special committee of the trades division of the wards committee reports considerable progress in arranging for meetings of employes of smaller factories in the district outside the Boston business area. Campaign speakers will address these meetings and appeal for funds.

These smaller factories are expected to add materially to the contributions to the campaign, Harry Caldwell, chairman of the trades division, reported to campaign headquarters.

The metropolitan committee, which is headed by Mrs. A. Barr Comstock, has completed its organization of cities and towns in the metropolitan area. Henry R. Brigham is chairman of the Cambridge section, and George S. Baldwin will take charge of Chestnut Hill. Newton will be under the supervision of Frank A. Day.

A meeting of the industry and finance committee will be held today, and reports will be made by canvassers at that time. Robert Herrick, general chairman of the drive, will address the group. A meeting of the special gifts committee is scheduled for today.

Pittsfield Youths Held in Newton

Their faces blackened by coal dust from riding a freight train from their home city, Pittsfield, to Worcester, two boys were picked up by Newton police on Commonwealth ave., near Boston College early today.

They were Lawrence R. and Paul E. Hebert, 16 and 15 years old respectively, of 516 Tyler st. The boys said they had walked most of the way from Worcester to Newton, on their way to Boston where they intended to seek work

In Newton ciurt they were held as runaways and their parents notified.

NEEDLE PICKETS KEEP ALL-NIGHT VIGILS

For the first time in the history of a strike in Boston, pickets were on duty all night in front of plants where the garment workers are on walkout. Most of the night pickets were male strikers, but they were relieved early today by girls, among them Adeline Ortalani, Armen Haroutunian and Sadie Shoian, all of a Kneeland st. firm. They took up their peaceful picketing while police guarded against outbreaks. (Boston American photo.)

JUDGE MORTON WARS ON DOPE

Judge James Morton in Federal court today told the clerk to make a special note of his disposition of a narcotic case involving two Cambridge men as he is determined, he said, "to wipe out the deadly business of dope peddling."

William P. MacRoberts, 54, of Austin st., Cambridge, was charged with selling dope obtained from Terence P. Durnin, also of Austin st

To MacRoberts an addict for 2[illegible] years Judge Morton was sympathetic. MacRoberts, it was revealed, sold part of the supply he bought for himself to other addicts in order to obtain money to buy more for his own use. Judge Morton gave him a year in the House of Correction in order that he might have a chance to break the habit

To Durnin, Judge Morton said: "Since you have no record, I am going to suspend your sentence of three years in the penetentiary, but if you violate the terms of your probation, I will see that you go to jail immediately. I am determined to wipe out the business of selling dope."

GIRL, 7, VICTIM OF HOLDUP

Most little girls like to "go to the store" for mother, but Mary Walsh, 7, of 10 Day st Roxbury, would just as soon somebody else ran the errands and earned the pennies.

Mary was sent by her mother Mrs. John Walsh to the grocery store at 212 Heath st. for a pound of butter and a dozen of eggs Abraham Rodman the manager was waiting on her when two gunmen walked in "One of them pushed me and I didn't say anything," said Mary. They took $32 and fled

"And Mary came home crying," added her mother. "She is still a little upset but wants to go to school."

2 HELD AFTER AUTO CRASH

An auto believed to have been carrying four or five men crashed through a stone wall in Salem st Lynnfield, early today and overturned in a 30-foot drop down an embankment.

John Jacques of Crescent st Portland, Me. who was found dazed and slightly injured in the car, was arrested on a charge of intoxication. Henry [illegible] of Market st., Newburyport, found some distance from the scene was arrested on a similar charge

He said he hadn't been in the car but had been thrown out of a speakeasy

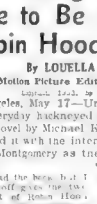
M-G-M BUYS "TWO THIEVES"

Robert Montgomery and Clark Cable to Be Co-Starred as Robin Hood Characters

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 17—Unusual and something different from the everyday hackneyed movie story is "Two Thieves," based on a novel by Michael Romanoff. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has purchased it with the intention of co-starring Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery as the two thieves who were hanged with Christ.

I have not read the book, but I am told Romanoff gives the two thieves a sort of Robin Hood character. I rather imagine the screen play will be allegorical with a modern aspect.



Louella O. Parsons

David O. Selznick, who is particularly enthusiastic about the novel and who recommended its purchase, will make it as his third M-G-M. production.

Ronald Colman hurried back from France to be at the bedside of his close friend Ernest Torrence, was not in vain. Ronnie reached the hospital a few hours before Ernest passed on and was with Elsie Torrence at the end. He was in France with his wife Ruth Chatterton and George Brent when word came of his friend's critical illness. He cut short his holiday to take the first boat back to America. That is typical of Ronald Colman. He doesn't make many friends, but those he makes are loyal to the end. He calls friends. He was best man and Lois Wilson was bridesmaid at the 25th anniversary of the Torrence wedding in December and no one was more glad and happy than the bride and groom when Ronald and Sidney were reminiscing last week. Ronald won't be the same without Ernest Torrence, gentle soul and loved by all who knew him.

Joan Crawford is happy to be divorced and everything but she is all upset because the trade papers printed her age as 27. That sounds very young for most of us, but Joan feels it isn't fair to her two years in which she will be in the public eye when she is really only 25. In private life Joan says it doesn't matter about two little years but as a screen handicap to a screen actress . . .

Kidnaping Case on Screen

Highlights of President Roosevelt's "report" to the nation on his work during the two months of his incumbancy, and of his contemplated plans for the immediate future, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's Orpheum.

Striking pictures of all of principals in the sensational Peggy McMath kidnaping case, come from Hartwich. Peggy is soon restored to her parents, and there is a charming group picture with the little girl, her father and mother and her seven-year-old brother, Francis. Mr. McMath highly praises the excellent work of the police and other authorities in restoring his daughter.

Next are shown pictures of the Barker brothers, Kenneth and Cyril, as they are held in $100,000 bail each for trial. Cyril gives a talk in which he tries to exonerate himself. The Globe Trotter supplies details of the nefarious crime.

Little Jack Little on Sunday Bill

Little Jack Little, song writer, pianist, vaudeville star, radio personality, is the artist selected by the Metropolitan as the special added attraction for next Sunday. Little, known to millions as the whispering baritone, was born in England as John James Leonard and was one of an auto mechanic. While attending a football game Jack became very excited and shouted himself hoarse. He strained his vocal cords so badly that it was long before he could raise his voice above a whisper. It was this incident that resulted in his unusual type of singing which he describes as an "intimate parlor voice."

George Arliss Film Coming to Modern

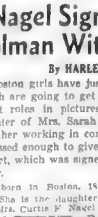
George Arliss will be seen on the Modern screen Saturday, in his latest production, "The Working Man." Boston's own star, Nelle Davis, plays opposite Arliss. Others in the cast are Hardie Albright, Gordon Westcott, Theodore Newton and J. Farrell MacDonald. The companion feature is "Sucker Money."

Ann Nagel Signed by Fox; Mari Colman With Paramount

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Two Boston girls have just gotten film contracts at Hollywood. Both are going to get what millions of girl fans desire—important roles in pictures. One of them is Ann Nagel, granddaughter of Mrs. Sarah Nagel of the Jamaicaway. Fox scouts saw her working in comedies on the Hal Roach lot, and were impressed enough to give her a test. Then came the offer of a contract, which was signed by Ann and her father, she being a minor.

Ann was born in Boston, 18 years ago. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis F. Nagel. The father was formerly in Boston theaters, then he stepped to Hollywood, selling himself with Howard C. Brown, also a Bostonian, in production. Both became expert directors, and about a year ago started partnership. The last letter had from Nagel, he was departing for Hawaii. His first Hawaiian picture was given its initial showing in Boston. Ann had remained with her grandmother until last summer, when she joined the family at Beverly Hills.



Ann Nagel

The other girl is Mari Colman, a few days ago recipient of a contract from Paramount. She got her stage training in stock here, and with 1500 other lassies took the screen test at the Long Island studios. She and one other were the only two chosen of the large number of applicants.

Miss Colman, on the Hollywood lot, fell under the eagle eye of Cecil B. De Mille. He picks his women by residing the soul through the eye as he once told me. Now comes the word that De Mille is going to star her in his next. This Day and Age," his first since "The Sign of the Cross."

It's worth adding that the credit for this big goes to Charles Bickford, Cambridge native, and himself a graduate of Boston stock companies.

Schwartz Coming to the Tremont

By HARRIS MORGAN

A great actor in a great play gives the idea of a drama coming to the Tremont next Monday night. Maurice Schwartz, star of the Yiddish theater, will be seen in "Yr the Kids" for a one weeks run, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Yosse Kabaras Schwartz's greatest triumph from many aspects in the reaches his greatest height as an actor, but he is also responsible for the staging and lighting. When one realizes the play is a spectacle of epic proportions, this takes on its full significance. The cast contains over 60 people and there are 26 scenes.

Maurice Schwartz

Schwartz was born in Russia. While a youngster, his family, non-theatrical moved to England, finally to New York. As frequently happens, Schwartz's theatrical ambitions gained only parental disfavor, so he was forced to strike out on his own, and get small stage jobs as best he could. This he did in various Yiddish companies, thus learning the rudiments of the stage. His talent was finally discovered by Maurice Morrison, a German-Yiddish actor, while on a tour of this country with Shakespeareans Forrest and Gordon classics. Morrison felt Schwartz had great talent and introduced him to David Kessler, then the genius of the Yiddish stage. Kessler accepted Schwartz and gave him leading roles. In 1918 Schwartz organized the first Yiddish Art Theater.

During the 14 years of its existence, Schwartz has produced 116 different plays of every kind, and from various literatures and nationalities, ranging from Shakespeare, to Rolland, to Toller Shaw, Wilde, to the most modern such as Jacob Gordon, Scholem Aleichem, Goldfaden and others.

"Tugboat Annie"

Following completion of "Tugboat Annie," Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery will be co-starred in "Ferike."

Vaudeville

Headlining the new vaudeville bill at Loew's Orpheum will be the broadcasting stars, The Radio Rubes—Rufe Davis, Artie Hall and John and Neil Laby. Another act will be the movie cartoons mouthpiece, Cookie Bowers, in "A Mouthful of Mirth." Included among other acts will be Don Ruis and Bonita, the South American dancers, with Julio Tramo and Vera Kennedy; Stratford and Mayberry, in "Walking Back Home;" the Three St. John Bros. in "Ups and Downs," and Boston's own DeMarco Girls, radio harmonizers.

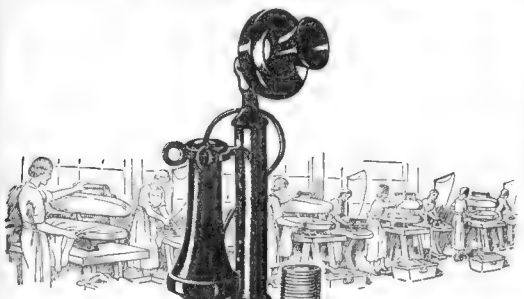
When a TELEPHONE paid Compound Interest



CELIA Swanson (not her real name) did part-time work in a laundry. When there was work, the laundry called—not Celia, whose family had no telephone—but the people next door, who would tell her.

One day, something went wrong. The laundry telephoned, but Celia was not told. Whether the people forgot, or were busy with their own affairs, or just didn't bother, nobody knew. But Celia lost two weeks' work.

That decided her. She couldn't afford to lose any jobs. She had a telephone put in, herself.

In a week, the laundry called. This time the summons came direct, and Celia went to work the next morning. The telephone was paying interest.

This job proved permanent. Moreover, within another week Celia got her sister a job, too.

By JACK CONWAY

What is the matter with the boxing game? Lou Brouillard and Sammy Slaughter convinced 4610 fans at the Arena that there is not anything the matter with the boxing game when the right kind of a fight is offered.

MR. BOSTON

The crowd at the Arena was satisfied that its investment of $5872 for a net gate of $4785 was a good one. Brouillard and Slaughter lived up to advance expectations. They furnished one of the greatest punching duels witnessed in a Boston ring in years.

Slaughter was knocked down six times, Brouillard once. It was a wide open scrap from start to finish. Both men fought in reckless fashion. They had the crowd in an uproar from the time the bell sounded for the opening of the first round until the contest ended.

Brouillard and Slaughter are to be complimented for their hard, earnest contest. I wish other boxers would follow their excellent example and give the public a run for its money. Then it could well be said that nothing is the matter with the boxing game.

It has been my contention that there is as much interest in boxing as ever when the right kind of a match is offered. The main trouble with the ring game is that many of the alleged tough boys have become cream puff boxers.

Loughran Gives Views on Heavyweight Bouts

Tommy Loughran, chatting with Hype Igoe, boxing editor of the New York Journal, questions whether Max Baer has the boxing brains necessary to become a champion. Tommy aired his views as follows:

"The fellow has a 100 per cent body, but—that noodle! I'm wondering if, in the past two years he has attained one. A man never can be the heavyweight champion of the world without a good head. Maybe this fellow has come around to better thinking in a fight. I want to see him in a real encounter first before I'll be able to weigh him up."

Loughran believes Jack Sharkey's speed and ability as a boxer will enable him to win from Primo Carnera. Loughran has had the greatest respect for Sharkey's fighting ability since the latter outboxed him and then knocked him out.

"I can whip that Carnera myself," said Tommy. "I'll admit that he's big. When a man grows to be over 200 pounds and is unusually tall, as in the case with Carnera, it would seem that he has all the natural advantages. These natural advantages can at once become disadvantages.

"The smaller man, Sharkey in this plot, can stoop low, cut and sweep at a man and the big fellow will have to discard advantages and be bound hand and foot to his disadvantages. A good man like Sharkey can make Carnera's outward advantages become a burden and a curse. Sharkey will surely defeat him. Carnera's size, if you will, makes it a cinch for Jack."

Loughran Staged Comeback Against Gastanaga

"I saw Loughran punch holes in Isadore Gastanaga in the Chicago Stadium recently," said Taylor. "Gastanaga is a big, powerful fellow and a terrific puncher. He is lacking in a defense, and walks forward with his jaw unprotected. Loughran stood off and bombarded his opponent with straight lefts to the face. Tommy found an opening for his right, and dropped Gastanaga to the canvas. The latter got up at once. Loughran has always been a powder puff puncher, and was startled when he dropped Gastanaga.

"I note King Levensky has been matched to meet Tuffy Griffiths in the Chicago Stadium on June 2. I saw the Kingfish score his recent one-round knockout over Charley Retzlaff. Levinsky wound up a punch around the floor and let it breeze. It landed flush on Retzlaff's jaw and the latter faded out of the picture.

"Levinsky has a score he wants to even with Griffiths. When these men met two years ago, Kingfish guaranteed Tuffy $25,000 to get the match. The decision and money went to Griffiths. The Kingfish would get some satisfaction if he could tip Griffiths over."

Random Shots at the Target

Better luck for the Red Sox now that they have their latest Boston opening out of the way . . . Ralph Clifford came near getting a hole in one while playing with Gene Sarazen and Bill Grimes at the Charles River Club . . . Even the gate receipts at golf matches have fallen off . . . The golfers need all of their spare cash to pay club dues and purchase new equipment . . . Rebel Tom Oliver continues to hit the old agate . . . He picked up two hits, one a double, in the opening game against the Browns . . . Jack Sharkey has been doing light training at Jerry Buckley's gym on Friend st. . . . The champion will leave for Orangeburg, N. J., the early part of next week to open his training camp for his title defense match with Primo Carnera on June 29 . . . Sammy Fuller is working out at Kelley & Hayes' Gym . . . Fuller could help the boxing situation in this city by sweeping back into action . . . Sammy has always been an action fighter when in condition.

STRANGLER LEWIS — ED DON GEORGE

Sharkey Faces Defeat by Carnera---Runyon

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright 1933 by Universal Service Inc.

New York, May 17—Signor Primo Carenra, the man with the big feet, will be the first Italian to fight for the heavyweight championship of the world, and probably the first Italian to hold the title. By that I mean that I expect Carnera to beat Jack Sharkey, mainly because Sharkey is "due," as we say.

The fact that Sharkey [illegible] Carnera once with ease must be [illegible] missed in considering the battle of June 29. Carnera was [illegible] than a novice when he met Sharkey at Ebbets field. Sharkey was a thoroughly seasoned performer and he went on from the Carnera [illegible] to win the world's championship.

SHARKEY PAST PEAK

But he demonstrated in his [illegible] for the title that he isn't the man he used to be. Not the man he was when he fattened Tommy Loughran and Jimmy Maloney, and battered the mighty Dempsey from [illegible] to post in the opening [illegible] [illegible] while winning the championship. Sharkey played that he was past his peak.

Carnera, in my opinion, will continue to improve. He is still young. He is not apt to reach his very best form for a couple of years. He is a better boxer than he is rated, and amazingly fast for a big fellow.

When the boys start talking about Carnera's supposed lack of punching power, they forget that this makes him no different from most of our other champion heavyweights.

PRIMO NEEDED HARD TESTS

The trouble with Carnera has been that his handlers apparently didn't realize at first how good he can fight. For a good year he was meeting the tippiest kind of tip-overs.

Had he been meeting men of the same calibre that Jack Dempsey met when he was battling out around Utah and California, the first fight with Sharkey wouldn't have been close.

For the past year Primo's handlers have been putting him in with pretty fair fighters and paying no attention to the possibility of losing a decision. These fights have been a valuable school of instruction for the Italian giant. He is commencing to learn what it's all about.

I made up my mind that Carnera could fight a couple of years ago in Florida when he was matched with Jimmy Maloney. He never trained an hour for that fight, because of a fractured rib but he stepped into the ring against a well-conditioned Maloney, and both sides "shooting" right from taw, and eked out a decision over James.

N. E. LEAGUE OPENS TODAY

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Hoping to see the league wax as strong under the regime of President Claude David[illegible] as it was in the days of the late lamented Tim Murnane, the reorganized New England League will take its curtain with three twilight games in Worcester, New Bedford and Lowell this evening.

The Quinc[illegible] Worcester game at Worcester will get the limelight for James Roosevelt, son of the President will assist Mayor Mahoney of Worcester in the inaugural ceremonies. At New Bedford, Mayor Charles Ashley, who has been mayor 25 years will throw out the opening ball at the New Bedford vs Taunton skirmish.

The New Bedford team is piloted by Fredoy Maguire former star of the Braves and Cubs. Other former big leaguers now identified with the New England circuit are W. W. "Eddy" Yarnell who pitched for the Phillies after starring at baseball and football at Vermont and Hal Weafer who played first base for the Cubs. Yarnell is managing Lowell and Weafer [illegible] the nem in Quincy.

Following this evening's games the same teams will play tomorrow at Quincy, Taunton and Attleboro. On Friday, Quincy plays at Lowell, Attleboro at New Bedford and Taunton at Worcester.

All week day games will be started at 5:45 o'clock. Daylight games will be played on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, starting at 3 p.m.

"We have a strong six league outfit to start the season with," declared President Claude Davidson, this morning, "and hope to see the league develop into one of the strongest minor league circuits in the country."

Bench Spectre Looming for 'Ailing' Bambino

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, May 17 (INS)—They do say that that amazingly obstinate man named Ruth is very near the end at last. So near, in fact, that they're not sure whether he's so bad because he's been ill or so ill because he's [illegible].

McCARTHY MUM

[illegible]

"Rest?" said Mr. McCarthy, indignantly. "We've only played nine games in the last two weeks. Ruth doesn't need a rest. He's just getting a late start. He got a late start last year, didn't he?"

Nevertheless, there is the testimony of an American League manager that the Yankees would not [illegible] for more than they would [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] Ruth has been [illegible] since the start of the season. STRANGLER, ON WIN PATH, IS THREAT TO CHAMP

Magic Coin Picks George to Win

The cold facts tipped Jack Conway's magic coin to name Strangler Lewis to win from Ed Don George tonight, as the former champion licked Jumping Joe Savoldi in New York Monday night and appears to be on another surge toward the top. Yet the coin is taking its chances with George. The latter has Flaming Youth on his side, and this should enable him to win if the Strangler doesn't clip him in the early stages of the match.

The magic coin scored once more when Lou Brouillard, on the short end of 10 to 8 betting at post time, defeated Sammy Slaughter in the boxing bout. The coin's 1933 record

Savoldi ruled a 2 to 1 favorite over the Strangler, but just when a dive from the ring knocked him cold. It was another case of Lewis' experience gaining the edge in a close match.

Lewis and George have only met once. Their previous meeting took place in Los Angeles two years ago in February. George had just won the world's title by defeating Gus Sonnenberg and he wished to gain international fame by adding the name of Lewis to his list of victims. The Strangler applied two hammerlocks to strip George of his title.

LEWIS' MAT STOCK BOOMS

Once more on the top one as a result of his recent win over Henri DeGlane, George will try to turn the Strangler back. Don says he has improved greatly as a wrestler since his last engagement with Lewis. He believes he now has the necessary knowledge to conquer the former champion.

Lewis' unexpected victory over Jumping Joe Savoldi has given his wrestling stock a tremendous boom. If the Strangler can win from George tonight he will be signed to meet Jim Browning in New York in a bout which would definitely settle who is the class of the heavyweight wrestlers.

George will carry youth, aggressiveness and a thorough knowledge of the fine points of wrestling into the ring tonight. He realizes he will be opposed by the master of the matmen and that he will be pinned if he makes a single mistake.

PATIENCE IMPORTANT

"Patience," Lewis once told me, "is the most important asset of a wrestler. The man who proves himself the better waiter usually wins in a close match."

Gus Sonnenberg, former world's champion, will have Man Mountain Dean as an opponent in a one fall match which will be to a finish. Dean proved himself one of the best of the roughhouse grapplers when he upset Pat Martin. In a previous bout Dean scored a fall against Sonnenberg, only to lose later when he was injured by a plunge from the ring.

Roland Kirchmeyer, Oklahoma [illegible], will take on Benny Ginsberg of New York. Count Zarynoff [illegible] with Casey Kazanjian. The Blue Masked Marvel will meet John Spellman while there will be four other prelims.

Dempsey Grateful For Max Go Help. Fans Turn Up Nose Now at Ballyhoo.

SOX DANGEROUS FOE, SAYS PILOT OF TIGERS

New York, May 17 (AP) [illegible] the Yankees are no longer the invincible outfit that appeared at the outset of the campaign.

"They are still the club to beat," said Bucky Harris, popular young pilot of the Tigers, "but Ruth and Gehrig did not knock down any fences on their first swing through the West, and the Yanks as a whole, do not seem to be clicking the way they did a year ago.

LOU FEELS STRAIN

"Ruth has slowed down a great deal, but he is still the most dangerous man on the club at bat, more so than Gehrig, who may begin to feel the strain of his long playing streak. You know there's a limit to durability, even in a man of his powers.

"I'm not picking my club to beat the Yankees, but it figures to be a much closer race all the way. Cleveland and Chicago, with Al Simmons looking just as good as ever, both are plenty tough. The Athletics look good. You will have to keep an eye on the Boston Red Sox from now on."

Diamond Skill Turned Bill Werber From Law

By JOE CASHMAN

Bill Werber grew up with many ambitions, even as you and I. But big league stardom was not one of them, which is strange. And the Red Sox new shortstop admits it, which is stranger.

[illegible] tell you that even as late as 1930 when the joined the Yankees upon being graduated from Duke University he had [illegible] to follow a diamond career for a living.

[illegible] before finishing his course [illegible] sweetheart. He took her to New York when he joined the Yanks and treated her to that [illegible] night boat trip up the Hudson when he was farmed out to [illegible] The young lady was beginning to like this baseball business.

BILL "MOST VALUABLE"

Bill was as indifferent toward baseball as ever yet he managed to be a most efficient workman. That's where he made his big mistake. For when the season was over he had a batting average of [illegible] a fielding mark that seemed too good to be true and he was unanimously named the most valuable player in the loop.

All of which resulted in our hero being called to the plate one afternoon and presented with $500 worth of furniture to outfit a love nest for himself and his bride.

By this time the boss of the Werber manse insisted that the law never be mentioned in her presence and Bill was beginning to think for the first time that there were tougher jobs than running around in a pretty uniform in the fresh air and sunshine for two hours or so every afternoon.

At the same time Bill attended Georgetown Law school, that winter. Just before going South with the Yanks the following spring he dropped in to see his uncle. He wanted to find out how much more legal lore he needed to qualify for that office berth.

"Three," Bill replied. (Ed. note—A son and heir had arrived just a few weeks before.)

"Then why in h—l do you fool around law," roared uncle. "A newcomer in this game can't make enough to support himself these days. Stick to baseball."

Bill followed this sage advice to the letter.

WHITTED SHIFTED WERBER

Werber is still a few weeks shy of being 24 years old. He's a native of Berwyn, Md., a suburb of Washington. He played third base until he went to Duke where Coach George Whitted, former Braves outfielder, shifted him to short. Jack Combs, former Athletics pound ace, was his mentor during his last two years in college.

Bill and the other new Sox couldn't stop the Browns in their local debut, the visitors winning, 3 to 2, in 11 innings. George Pipgras, the only one of the Fenway newcomers who didn't get in the game will go to the mound this p. m. and promises to even the series count.

Our old friend Mervyn Shea, who went to St. Louis for Lloyd Brown and Rick Ferrell, the Sox starting battery yesterday, spoiled the day for the natives. He singled in the 11th, was sacrificed to second and came in on Reynolds' single off Bob Kline, who replaced Brown in the eighth.

Suitcase Bob Seeds sent the game into overtime with as great a catch as has ever been made at the Fens. He replaced Jolley in left with two out and two hostiles on in the eighth. The next Brownie walked, filling the sacks. Up stepped Deb Garms to bat for Muddy Ruel and the rookie belted the first pitch to the scoreboard. Suitcase raced up the bank, staggered, stuck his hands up over his head against the wall and nabbed the ball.

DAVIS STARS IN TIFF

CANADIANS IN QUARREL ON EVE OF PLAY

Toronto, May 17 (AP)—Garnet M. Meldrum, non-playing captain of Canada's Davis Cup team, today said that the announcement last night in Montreal that Dr. Jack Wright and Gilbert Nunns would play singles for Canada against the United States in their zone final tomorrow was premature.

"No one has authority to make such an announcement," Meldrum said, and the selection of the Canadian players will not be made known officially until the draw in Montreal late today. He left for Montreal early this morning.

Montreal, May 17 (AP)—Given only an outside chance to defeat the United States in the zone final of Davis Cup play beginning tomorrow, the chances of the Canadian team were further weakened today by reports of dissatisfaction among players.

The French language newspaper, "Le Canada," says that Marcel Rainville, probably Canada's best known internationalist who was not used in singles against Cuba last week, threatened to resign from the team unless he was given another opportunity to play Gilbert Nunns, who replaced him.

BEAT RAINVILLE

Nunns defeated Rainville in a test at Hot Springs before the start of the Cuban tie and won both his matches in Canada's four-to-one victory. Rainville played only in the doubles with Dr. Jack Wright, head of the Canadian forces, and they lost.

The United States team, headed by Ellsworth Vines, Jr., United States and Wimbledon champion and generally ranked No. 1 in the world, is an overwhelming favorite to win the series and the right to meet Argentina in the American zone final at Washington May 25, 26 and 27.

ALLISON-VINES IN SINGLES

Playing with Vines in singles will be Wilmer Allison, second ranking United States player, while George M. Lott, Jr., and John Van Ryn, former Wimbledon doubles champions, will handle that assignment against Canada.

B. U. Grad Gridmen to Meet Varsity

Boston University will experiment next fall and try an alumni game in football to see if it can draw customers. On November 4 the varsity will stack up against former Terrier stars in a regular game.

The Terriers were supposed to have played Ithaca on that date but the game was called off, and as there was nothing in the offing Prof. Charles D. Giauque, director of athletics, arranged for the grad game.

The Alumni will be led by Santo Marino, captain three years ago. Members of the 1932 team who have already consented to play are Danny Harrington, Capt. Carl Clem, Gus LeGuern, Joe Paterno, Herb Semino, Hugo Bertolino and George Guvette. Others who are expected to play are Phil Hoor-stein, Jack McCarthy, Johnny Murphy, Jim Truden, Art Dorfman and several other old shining lights.

Charley O. to Carry Top Weight

Chicago, May 17 (AP) Charley O., the R. M. Eastman Estate's 3-year-old which finished third in the Kentucky Derby, will carry top weight of 122 pounds in the first running of the $5,000 added Illinois Derby, Saturday at Exposition Park.

Of the 11 other nominees, Col. Hatfield will be in at 118 pounds, with Sweep Rush, Fingal, Trace Call, Pot Au Brooms, Spicson and North Mill carrying 115. Slapped, at top, Fair Rochester and Justice B., have been assigned 110 pounds.

Dr. Prenn Resigns From All Clubs

Berlin, May 17 (INS)—The German Tennis Association today nominated players for the French championship matches and revealed the German net ace, Dr. Daniel Prenn, a Jew, had notified the association he had resigned from all German tennis clubs.

Cilly Aussem and Fraulein Krahwinkel were named for the ladies' singles, Herr Kleinschroth for the men's singles and Gottfreid von Cramm and Herr Lundt for the men's doubles.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

The Francis Ouimet-Gene Sarazen match, which starts this afternoon at Weston and winds up tomorrow at Charles River, is a "natural." More than any other player, Francis is responsible for the popularity of golf in New England and while Gene is recognized as the world's greatest golfer.

Ouimet "on" Game

Ouimet has been shooting Charles River in the low 70's of late and he will be tough to beat over the Newton course.

During the dinner to the United States and British open champion last night at the Ritz Carlton, Sarazen stated that nothing would please him more than to open the new George Wright Golf Club, the municipal course in Hyde Park with an exhibition match with Ouimet. Mayor James M. Curley accepted the offer and the match will be played as soon as a clubhouse is built.

The Wollaston four-ball team appeared to be a trifle overconfident against Woodland. The players did not put the zip in their efforts they did against Brae Burn and as a result won their match by the scant margin of two points.

Tom McNamara, representative of a sporting goods company, who is traveling with Gene Sarazen and Joe Kirkwood, still claims that the best greens in the country are in New England. Tom welcomed the opportunity to come here in order to visit his mother, who lives in Brookline.

Fred Hannon and Frazie O'Leary were 'hot' yesterday at Wollaston. They had a better ball of 68 against Dale Lindsey and Charlie Dickerman of Woodland and picked up two and one-half points. Although the Woodlanders came home in 33, they were one down.

Hannon Shoots 72

Frazier O'Leary was up against a tough proposition, trying to help Fred Hannon, who was 72 on his own ball but "Jerry" came in on four holes which is a wonderful feat.

Vines, Allison to Play Singles for U.S.

Montreal, May 17 (INS) Ellsworth Vines, U. S. singles champion, and Wilmer Allison, of Texas, were expected to oppose Dr. Jack Wright, Vancouver veteran and Gilbert Nunns, youthful Toronto star, in the opening singles matches between Canada and the United States in the North American Davis Cup zone final here tomorrow.

George Lott and John Van Ryn will be the American doubles combination.

BROUILLARD VICTOR OVER SLAUGHTER

By JACK CONWAY

Lou Brouillard punched his way to a decisive victory over Sammy Slaughter in a furious 10-round battle at an Argonne A. A. show at the Arena. Slaughter was on the floor six times, Brouillard once.

It was the kind of bout the noble press agents like to promise the public but which seldom occurs.

FIRST ROUND EVEN

Back in the ring the rivals traded blows. Slaughter sent two rights crashing to the jaw. Brouillard came back with a stinging right hook to the jaw. It was an even round.

The second was a furious round. During a wild exchange of punches, Brouillard dropped Slaughter with a swinging left hand punch to the jaw. As Slaughter got up, after taking a count of nine, Brouillard rushed him, but was dropped by a right to the body.

The fourth round was crowded with action. Early in the frame Slaughter fell through the ropes. Late in the session Slaughter breezed two rights to Brouillard's jaw.

The seventh was a parade for Brouillard. Slaughter was in poor condition. He threw his right hand punches while going away and few of them even hit Brouillard's arms.

Slaughter did better in the eighth round. A left hook opened Brouillard's right eye. Brouillard rallied late in this frame, but the honors for the session went to Slaughter. It was the first round he won.

NINTH FRAME DRAMATIC

The ninth round was dramatic. Brouillard crashed a terrific left to the body which staggered Slaughter. A short right hook to the chin dropped Slaughter for a count of five. Lou rushed his opponent and knocked him through the ropes with a right to the jaw. Slaughter was back in the ring at seven and almost knocked Brouillard over with a right to the jaw. It was Brouillard's round.

Dick Maloney of South Boston, a brother of Shamus, knocked out Jake Eagle of the South End in two heats. Maloney showed improvement over his last start, and looks as if he is going places in the ring.

Card Signals Used as Savoldi Wins

New Haven, Ct., May 17 (INS) Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football star, used his gridiron training to defeat Al Gelcewicz, of Manchester, the so-called "Red Devil," before 2500 wrestling fans here last night in 27 minutes 55 seconds.

Timekeeper Ed O'Brien caught one of Savoldi's drop-kicks on the nose, and wild shouting against Bill Lewis' manner of giving Gelcewicz signals by means of playing cards added to the excitement.

Germans to Welcome Stars of All Creeds

Chicago, May 17 (INS)—In a letter from Dr. Theodore Lewald, president of the German Olympic committee, Avery Brundage, head of the American Olympic group, today was informed that all athletes regardless of race, would receive a courteous welcome in Berlin.

"There will not be the slightest discrimination made in the Berlin games because of religion or race, and, furthermore, every participant has the assurance of a kind, hearty, courteous reception," Lewald explained.

3 Jockeys Suspended at Sportsman Park

Chicago, May 17 (INS)—Banishment of three jockeys from Sportsman's Park here brought an announcement today from Presiding Steward Sam C. Nuckols that their suspension was the final move in breaking up an alleged "jockey ring."

Revocation of the license of Jockey Lester Dye following his ride on Semester started an inquiry which resulted in the suspension of Jockeys M. Dupuy and D. Burney.

Crusader Netmen Duel With Harvard

Harvard and Holy Cross varsity tennis outfits will meet this afternoon at Divinity Field, Cambridge. The Crusaders will use Captain James Nicholson, Jack Kiernan, Jack Cahill, James O'Shea, William Findlan, and Jack Haggerty against the Crimson, with Manager Frank Rooney and Edward Molire accompanying the team as substitutes.

Little Change in Condition of Bush

Indianapolis, Ind., May 17 (INS)—Physicians today said the condition of Owen "Donie" Bush, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, was still critical. Bush is suffering from bronchial pneumonia at his home here.

Voice of Broadway

By Louis Sobol

From across the seas comes fluttering in daintily to this department a lovely tribute to a lovely fellow, Adolf Hitler. It appears in the unbiased Vienna Herald, Vienna, dated April 28, and is a report of a lecture by a Mr. Selkirk Panton before the American Women's Club. "The outstanding features of Hitler," chirp Panton, "are his absolute honesty, idealism and complete absence of conceit. His face is kind, he is not tall but rather stout. With piercing blue eyes, he has a gentle smile and would not hurt a fly (sic!). He loves animals, flowers and children, does not drink nor smoke and has only one hobby. You hardly would guess what—to design the stage decorations for Wagner's operas." (How ducky!) The stories of Hitler as a man of blood are without foundation. It is ridiculous to think that there are more atrocities in Germany now than since 1918. Hitler is . . . the Germans faith, comradeship between men.

Leona, fetch me that copy of Hans Christian Anderson, please.

The gentleman who erected the Villa Richard, now known as the Riviera, is some 80 years old, I am informed. Gene Richard is his name and he no longer cares about night clubs or night life. But every so often he appears on the grounds of the place he built many, many years ago and descends to the water front where he finds a spot and sits there for hours. No one has been able to locate him on these occasions and his only answer when he reappears is, "I've been sitting on my Rock of Health." He attributes his longevity and his excellent health to this mysterious rock—the potency of which, he insists, will vanish if its identity is revealed.

William Faulkner, author of the sensational ome "Sanctuary," went to Hollywood for a number of reasons. First of all he was offered a writing contract at a figure that compared favorably with the war debt. For another thing, he was offered a lot of money. And for a third, he was offered plenty of money. Briefly, Bill Faulkner went to Hollywood because it was a nice easy way to make a living. But for two weeks he reported at the office daily, sat around—and did exactly nothing. He couldn't get going. Finally he approached his chief and suggested timidly, "I wonder if you'd let me work at home. I can't seem to get down to anything working here—I think I'd be able to get going working in my own place amid familiar surroundings. You know what I mean." He was told to go ahead. Several days passed with no word from Faulkner. A week passed. Ten days. Worried, the officials called up his hotel. They learned he had checked out. They learned more than that. They learned Faulkner meant what he said when he told them he'd like to work at home. He had gone back to his home-town in Mississippi!

With the highest respect and regard for the gentleman who is now the President of these United States, I never felt quite so badly that the Hon. Alfred E. Smith wasn't occupying that lofty office as Sunday night when I attended the annual Friars' Frolic and watched the audience tear out the seats, pound each other on the back, let out war-whoops, whistle and cheer when the former Governor stepped before the footlights, told a few gags, tilted a brown derby over his left eye and then sang verse and chorus of "Sidewalks of New York" with all the poise of a professional vaudevillian. And so it seems to me, at some time or other it would be nice to have as President of these United States a fellow who doesn't mind getting up before a theater audience and sing a song—off key!

CONCORD RADIO TREAT

Legislators of New Hampshire Form Band Among Members; Broadcast Tonight

By N. F. T.

Unless our neighborly friends in good old New Hampshire happen to be pulling a fast one as the saying goes, something exceptionally snappy is being staged thereabouts tonight. Accept it or argue, they have a brand new band made up of musicians recruited from the ranks of State Legislature members. What's more, a radio broadcast by said sovereign aggregation during its session takes place via WBZ-WBZA, between 10 and 10.30 p. m.

Council Chamber Concert

It's like this: tonight is the eve of adjournment, an occasion marked each year by an innovation of distinctly unique character. At the same time, bear in mind it is all quite serious, this band business. On second thought, perhaps not all. Indeed Representative L. C. Twombly twirls a mean baton, they say. As emphatic evidence, just wait until he waves his magic wand through strains of "The Governor Winant March," recently written by our John B. . . . of Suncook. To this the Governor himself . . . and . . . marks of due acknowledgement.

Billy B. Van, the popular screen and stage comic, begins a series of broadcasts here next Tuesday evening, to be heard twice weekly there after, WEEI, on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at seven o'clock. Wilvum says he has a spark in new program ideas and feels stories will undoubtedly like it. Okay Bee Bee Vee, bring it on.

Boston loudspeaker patrons will welcome a visit by Little Jack Little in person on Sunday next. He comes to take a stage turn behind Metropolitan Theatre footlights for the afternoon and evening performances.

HITLER HEARD

From an engineering angle, today's transatlantic relay of a session of the Reichstag, heard via WBZ, by Herr Adolf Hitler of Germany, was accomplished well. It came over in clear fashion. Hitler has an impatience of tone and an excited style of delivery that makes for an impassioned, rather than inspiring, impression among listeners. How fast he fires away! Thoughts he would convey hardly have a chance to register, even though one may be well up on his or her German. What he said can be perused elsewhere in our favorite evening newspaper today. Television Near at Hand

By AIRCASTER

New York. It won't be many months now before television is out of the laboratory, ready for practical use. But merely being ready won't give that audience which wants to see as well as hear, any particular break. The things that are holding television back are manifold. One is the economic problem. Television will need more material than radio, the stage and screen combined use at present. It will need to be a perpetual variety show, and it will have to tie up with either radio and the theater, or the movies, and it will call for the filming of huge film productions. How the bills for such tremendous use of material will be paid is the problem that must be solved before the television laboratories are through with their experiments.

According to Dr. Alfred Goldsmith, former RCA engineer, and other experts, practical television is not years away—only months, but its economic problems are far from solved. Added to this difficulty is the sudden realization, as explained by "The Billboard," that television, possible only in a darkened house, will be tough on the eyes because, unlike radio, it won't permit bridge games or inattention, but will demand a concentration of sight and hearing, both at home and in the theater.

COUNCIL PLANS CLEAN-UP

Programs for Children will be the foremost subject of discussion when those veritable watch dogs of radio, the members of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education, meet in third annual session at the Waldorf Friday. It is hardly a secret that the expert observers of the body rate most of the juvenile presentations on the air today as of no educational value and as very poor entertainment. Sensational super-thrilling adventures and hideous presentations will probably come in for a more thorough discussion than even the crime dramas have in the past few weeks, and it's a pity the public won't be admitted.

ONE MAN'S POISON, ETC.

It is Goodman Ace, of the "Easy Aces," who writes those scripts in which his wife, Jane, becomes such a dumb cracker. "I'll say the world;" "I do it for my own amazement," etc., have made her famous. And lately, she has taken to advising friends who have indigestion to "drink some bichloride," which is her way of tagging bicarbonate.

Goodman Ace has written so many of these dumb cracks that they are now part of his normal vocabulary. Thus it almost floored the soda clerk the other day when Ace walked into a drug store, feeling rather ill, and said absently: "Give me a nice drink of bichloride."

OFF THE TICKER

The day's news. Floyd Gibbons' telephone call confirms my note of last week that he will be heard on a regular commercial via a nation-wide hookup from the World's Fair. . . And the Grand Street Boys, who take the air tonight via WOR, will have Ann Lester open their program as a special honor at 9.15. . . . will sing the National Anthem. . . Guy Lombardo begins a series of weekly sustainings via WABC from Chicago on Tuesday, May . . . at 11.30 p. m. . . . Rubinoff . . . bet from Eddie Cantor . . . going on the air vocally, but he had to go to a Raleigh . . . to do it. . . Edwin C. Hill's "Inside Stories" fold in a commercial sense the middle of June.

Higherups Let Racket Kings Rule Free

By DAMON RUNYON

This is the fourth of a series of articles on rackets and racketeers

New York, May 17.—[illegible] a Policeman Jones, walking his beat in your town [illegible] most conscientious fellow who wouldn't [illegible] to save his life, and who is firm[illegible] committed [illegible] upholding the law.

[illegible] the street [illegible] smiling [illegible] children and old ladies. Maybe the city hasn't [illegible] lous, but otherwise all is right with the world as far as Policeman Jones is concerned.

One day Policeman Jones becomes aware of illegality on his beat in the person and proceedings of Mr. Herman Abbadabba known to Policeman Jones as a wrong gee, perhaps an out-and-out criminal [illegible] in any event [illegible]

Mr. Herman [illegible] gaged [illegible] gambling [illegible] a swindle [illegible] the peace and [illegible] etc."

FROM HIGHER UP

So Policeman Jones [illegible] Mr. Herman Abbadabba [illegible] eyes of [illegible] Abbadabba [illegible] some fellow found [illegible] window [illegible]

But [illegible] Jones and [illegible] sergeant [illegible] tion that [illegible] Abbadabb[illegible] mediately [illegible] ings-on [illegible] captain [illegible] is saying to the [illegible] man Jones:

"I believe I would lay off of Mr. Abbadabba."

But don't [illegible] or the captain [illegible] tor. The [illegible] same one has said to them:

"I believe I would lay off of Mr. Abbadabba."

Some one who [illegible] say that to them [illegible]

And there [illegible] the racket [illegible]

I think [illegible] herently [illegible] that [illegible] long [illegible] ers. They [illegible] cause [illegible] a policeman [illegible] experience [illegible] they realize the [illegible] of contamination from [illegible] racketeer.

But policemen want to hold their jobs, even as you and I, and there are mighty few cities in these United States nowadays where policemen's jobs are safeguarded entirely by strict attention to duty, honesty, and the upholding of the law.

PROCLAMATION SEDATIVE

Mr. Abbadabba may be a bum and a cheap [illegible] Jones, but [illegible] snaky [illegible] he has [illegible] him in good [illegible]

Perhaps [illegible] mayor or [illegible] chief of police [illegible] given to proc[illegible] the public prints to the effect [illegible] the racketeer must go, which makes encouraging reading [illegible] the tax payers, who immediately go back to sleep again on the racketeering problem, fully satisfied that [illegible] problem is now well taken care of.

They awake [illegible] that the racketeer [illegible] still flou[illegible] lamation [illegible] If you [illegible] government [illegible] go" proc[illegible] years [illegible] a nice fou[illegible] mundane [illegible]

Or perhaps [illegible] of those periodical round-up-of-racket-eer towns of which there are many in the U. S. A. The idea is that the police gather in all the lads around town who are definitely known to them as racketeers, gangsters, and the like.

OLD ROUND-UP ALIBI

They are arrested with a great hullabaloo, and much publicity in the public prints [illegible] dinary feature of this round-up business is [illegible] the public [illegible] a character of [illegible] tance to bring a [illegible] derman to his [illegible] The big fish always get away.

But the round-up serves the purpose of a sedative to the public nerves, especially if they are somewhat on edge from an overdose of racketeerism. The police head of the average community, unhampered by political considerations and functioning honestly and sincerely, would be apt to make the racketeers in his section hard to catch in about 24 hours.

If the police always made public the names of those sponsoring the release of known bad characters after these characters have been arrested, I think some of our communities would be surprised and shocked.

As I have suggested, a number of cities haven't been paying their policemen with any degree of regularity for a couple of years. Yet the citizens of these cities expect the policemen to go on performing their duties honestly and efficiently and the citizens would be appalled if one of the policemen took a five dollar gratuity, and would denounce him as a thief.

STRONG-ARM RAIDS

And at the same time [illegible] citizens are [illegible] feting and [illegible] Mr. Herman Abbadabba in his racket or nefariousness.

In the pre-prohibition days before racketeering had taken on the aspect of big business, and the racketeers-to-be were mere hoodlums, the politicians had no use for them, except perhaps at election times. In those days, the police de-

[illegible] financial center has become distinctly less depressive. Said one leading banker to the writer:

"While there still are many uncertainties, we cannot but feel encouraged over the latest reports we are receiving from our clients. That there has been a distinct pickup in some lines cannot be questioned. For example, one nationally-known company in which we are interested actually sold as much last month as it did in the previous three months. Naturally many of our larger loans have been tremendously strengthened. Our collateral loans, also, have improved enormously by the extraordinary rise in stocks, loans, bonds, commodities—as well as most raw materials."

Most bankers are chary of being compelled to guarantee the deposits of other banks. One banker writes:

"History shows that in all periods of financial stress proposals for guaranteeing or insuring bank deposits have been made. But where tried, they have proved a disastrous failure. Surety companies insuring public funds, although operating with a very selected group of banks and charging a substantial annual premium, have found it impossible to carry on such business without substantial loss in times of financial distress.

"As Senator Glass well said, strong banks should not be assessed to pay a premium for mismanagement. A guarantee plan would drive the strongest member banks from the Federal Reserve System.

"It is probable that a guarantee plan would force many of the larger banks to withdraw from the Reserve System. Were the government to inaugurate a guarantee plan, it would probably demonstrate on a large scale what has already been demonstrated in nine states, and it would probably take the banking business a generation to recover. Guaranteeing deposits leads to bad banking of the worst kind."

PLENTY GOLD TO SUPPORT MONEY

LIVE NEWS OF WALL STREET LEADERS

QUARTERS bullish on United Fruit figure that weakness of the American dollar of particular advantage to United Fruit inasmuch as a large part of its business is with Europe. For this reason expectation is that second quarter earnings will make an exceedingly favorable showing. Under normal conditions the current three months is usually the second best of the year to the company although for the past three years it has been the poorest.

Rise Strengthens Banking Position

Failure of bank stocks to enjoy the measure of advance favoring [illegible] pledged as collateral against bank loans is puzzling some quarters of the street. Rise in prices for nearly every type of common stock has added correspondingly to the equity value of loans without receiving much appreciation in trading circles. Apparently the public seems to be avoiding bank stocks because of the double liability penalty and the continued small earning power of most financial institutions owing to low money rates.

Rigid Policy on Certain Forms of Loans

At the same time a few large lending institutions are pursuing a rigid policy on certain forms of collateral loans. One is understood to have tightened up on advances against day loans by reducing the limit of over-certifications to 10 per cent of the former privilege. This means that houses which ordinarily borrowed $1,000,000 on a day note basis can now obtain only $100,000.

—SPECTATOR— Says:

It was encouraging to see some real leadership for a change. The story is pretty well widespread that there will be some big doings if Hitler's speech is moderate. For our part we would be inclined to take some more profits on another bulge in the next couple of days.

Telephone Bandwagon

Here's irony for you. About every important trader is on the Telephone bandwagon market-wise. And not so long ago it was the prime short sale not only over the dividend fear but the supposed inflation [illegible]. The same for du Pont. At 30 the stock was supposed to be the perfect sale. Now we hear the fanciest prices running all the way up to 85. How long would take du Pont to get earnings to justify the latter figure is some [illegible] rise again.

The boom in the textile industry [illegible] much of the interest in the chemical stocks. Well, the last month has shown that nothing is impossible. Great Western Sugar's earnings are said to be running between $4 and $6 a share for the year.

Here and There

The statisticians are shaking the dust off of their old lists of the companies that would benefit from Russian recognition. This was a natural development of the President sending his peace message to Moscow, and probably accounted for the snappy way Case Threshing and Harvester came out of their [illegible]. And we wouldn't be surprised if it had something to do with stories we get of "big doings" in Westinghouse . . .

BUSINESS HAS TENDENCY TO ADVANCE

By FRANK H. MELOON

That business in general is retaining its lately demonstrated tendency to advance is shown today by the Econostat's index. This shows a volume better than a week ago for automobile production, bituminous coal output, cotton consumption, crude oil production, steel output and merchandise carloadings. Electric power production and commodity carloadings are found holding unchanged, while construction contracts are the one important line sagging.

President Carl R. Gray of the Union Pacific, who has twice refused the crown of czar for American railroads tells us estimates of annual savings under the administration's railroad bill would be cut to about $100,000,000. Mr. Gray looks for no great cut in the number of railroad workers. Back in 1918 he refused to succeed McAdoo as director-general of our railroads and early in April of this year declared he would not accept the post of national co-ordinator. At one time Mr. Gray was suggested for the presidency of the New Haven, but never seriously considered taking it.

Carl R. Gray

"Sugar industry's growth," says Joseph Stagg Lawrence, editor of the Econostat, "is shown by the fact that U. S. per capita consumption, which amounted to 38.1 pounds during the period, 1875-1879, grew steadily until it reached a total of 119.2 pounds per capita in 1928. This means that the average family consumed more than a quarter of a ton of sugar annually. Since then, under the combined influence of the depression and possibly dietary dictates, the per capita consumption has declined until it is now but little over a hundred pounds.

• • •

The demand for sugar is peculiar in that it will vary considerably within certain price ranges, increasing rapidly with a reduction in price and declining with a rise. After a certain price point is reached, which may be roughly defined as three cents a pound, further reductions seem to have no effect upon consumption.

• • •

Those who study the oil industry merely from the American end sometimes fail to get a true world picture. Note special weakness has appeared in the oils on the London Stock Exchange. This is ascribed to announcement of a drastic cut in British gasoline is near. The cut caused little surprise in informed circles overseas where it is understood the Rumanian oil interests are expected to refuse to renew the Paris agreement recently effected.

• • •

One London authority says the British embargo on Russian oil has diverted large quantities of oil to European and Near Eastern markets and this, coupled with excess exports from the United States, following the depreciation in the dollar and failure of the United States to impose restriction upon production, has made the Rumanians regard further restriction as useless.

—STATE ST.— Hears:

That the trading element continues to play for further rally. They feel that the dangers of being long at this time are offset in fair measure by the widespread anticipation of a corrective setback. The distance remaining before a final top may not be great, but it seems worth gambling that it will be greater than hoped-for dips from current prices. The evidences of support around the lows of Monday and Tuesday suggest protective stops just under those levels.

Europe

In the event that European nations find it impossible to agree among themselves there is considerable fear felt for the well being of domestic markets. If disarmament plans come a cropper it is said that the economic conference is doomed to failure. This outline is undoubtedly along correct lines.

We are convinced, however, from conversations with well-informed observers, that any reaction in our security marts will be temporary. Complete breakdown of world peace plans for arms and economic strife will only be the opening gun in the battle of world inflation. The markets will not fall under such auspices.

Another consideration to keep in mind when weighing the possibility of adverse news from Europe is the attitude of the administration. It does not appear that another deflationary movement will be allowed to get very far at this stage. Domestic not foreign influences must be considered as dominating price trends.

Briefs

On all the above counts it does not seem that developments, no matter how discouraging they may be, should be permitted to cast a spell of pessimism. Reactions from them may eventuate, but they will be temporary, since all the signs point to the use of powerful counter irritants.

That some disappointing event across the water may coincide with the highs of the present upswing is a possibility. But it will be well to differentiate then between actual cause and 'contributing effect.' Actual cause is more likely to be a normal exhaustion after a prolonged upswing.

Preliminary reports of carload [illegible] indicate that the week-end statements may be most cheerful. As it is a bit early yet, the forecast that this year's figures may exceed those of 1932 is made with hope in a somewhat dominating position. But there it is.

BOSTON STOCKS MOVE HIGHER

Several leading issues were pushed into new high territory in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. Utilities recorded the best gains with a few carrier participating in the advance. American Telephone jumped more than 2 points to a new high for the year.

Edison Electric was more than a point higher and New England Telephone showed a gain of well over a point. Atchison and Pennsylvania soared to new highs in the rail group on gains of better than a point.

Stone & Webster jumped over 2 points to a fresh 1933 peak. Swift & Co. and Swift Internacional were likewise at fresh tops for the year. Mergenthaler Linotype slumped 4 points on announcement of the omission of the dividend. Greif Bros. was 3 points higher and Gillette gained about a point.

Dividends

Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore declared quarterly dividends as follows: Ninety cents per share on the no par common shares, $1.25 per share on the Series A 5 per cent preferred $1.50 per share on the Series D 6 per cent preferred, $1.37½ per share on the Series E 5½ per cent preferred. All dividends are payable July 1.

• • •

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey declared a quarterly dividend of 70 cents per share on the common stock, payable June 30 to stockholders of record June 1. Regular quarterly dividends of $2 per share also were declared on the 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock; $1.75 on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock; $1.25 on the no par value $5 cumulative preferred stock and the regular monthly dividend of 50 cents a share on the cumulative preferred stock.

• • •

Mergenthaler Linotype Co. omitted dividend due at this time. Three and six months ago payments of 40 cents each were made.

STILL SOME IN PRIVATE HANDS, SAYS HANEY

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, May 17—We now have a monetary gold stock of over a monetary gold stock of about the same as a year ago. This is a very large sum, and it is ample in the opinion of most students to support all the money and credit we can possibly use to advantage.

There are still a few hundred millions of gold and gold certificates being hoarded by private individuals, probably about half the total of $1,200,000,000 which was in circulation at the end of February.

The great bulk of our large gold holding, however, is now being hoarded by the government. That is the exact words for it. Our treasury will not pay gold out, either as a medium of circulation or as interest on government bonds.

We will not use the gold ourselves. We will not let others use it. What is it good for? What is the government going to do with it? Probably no closely similar situation has ever existed.

HELD IN RESERVE

We have been accustomed to think of our monetary gold supply as held by the Treasury in trust as a reserve for the nation's monetary and credit system. Gold certificates, United States notes and Federal Reserve notes were claims for gold. Government bonds were payable, principal and interest, in gold. Thus the gold in the Treasury belonged to the people.

Now this gold belongs to us only in the sense that it does not belong to any one else. We cannot get any of it. Not only have gold certificates been retired, but Federal Reserve notes are being replaced by Federal Reserve Bank notes, which are not backed by any gold. The government has even refused to pay its bond interest in gold.

Nor does this situation seem to have been necessary. Foreigners had balances which could be withdrawn amounting to perhaps $600,000,000. That would still leave us plenty. The greatest danger was that our own citizens would hoard so much gold that the Treasury would not have enough, and on March 8 $1,429,901,000 in gold and gold certificates were "in circulation."

This domestic hoarding, however, was almost entirely due to our own politics, which caused people to fear an abandonment of the gold standard. There has probably not been a day in recent years when a firm and definite decision at Washington to stand by the gold standard would not have put an immediate end to any tendency to hoard gold.

HINGES ON DEBTS

Now what is the government going to do with its gold hoard? We must assume that it has some purpose in impounding and hanging on to our gold.

I think that the impression is growing that the final answer hinges on a world settlement of international debts, tariffs and currencies.

Owing to trade dislocation and debts, the nations of the world have been struggling to get and hold gold. As a creditor nation, we got a large part. Several nations were forced to abandon their attempts to stay on the gold standard, and sought to make a virtue of necessity by so manipulating their paper currencies that they could gain some temporary advantage in trade, at the same time threatening not to pay their debts.

In this country, the usual depression demand for cheap dollars arose from farm debtors, greatly reinforced by the "paper losses" of numerous former speculators. But this would not have been decisive I think, had it not been for the foreign debt situation which led to the breakdown of gold settlements among nations.

So we may doubt if the use of the government's gold hoard will be determined until the future relation between the dollar and pound and franc is settled. Meanwhile, it is a frozen asset.

We will not even know how many dollars it represents until we know for sure how much is to be put into the standard dollar of the future.

Central's Loading Total Is Greater

New York, May 17 (AP)—Carloadings of the New York Central Railroad for the week ended May 13 were nearly three per cent greater than in the like 1932 period, totaling 84,042 against 81,805 last year. In the previous week the road handled 83,892 cars.

Insolvency Index Is Again Lowered

Dun's Insolvency Index for the early part of May is 113.7, compared with 114.8 for April, and 152.6 for the same time in May a year ago.

The Insolvency shows a very decided improvement in the record of business failures in the United States this year. The March Insolvency Index at 111.4 was below that for any preceding March in several years.

MODERATE RISE IS REGISTERED FOR LEADERS

New York, May 17—Leading shares moved moderately higher in trading today on the New York Stock Exchange with dealings brisk. Motor shares were especially active, led by General Motors and Chrysler.

So-called "wet" issues were again in demand, Crown Cork and National Distillers scoring good gains.

ADVANCES NUMEROUS

Advances of a point or two were numerous, including such issues as American Water Works, Industrial Rayon, Public Service of New Jersey, Lambert and Safeway.

With additional time for the study of its implications, the financial community was practically unanimous in approving President Roosevelt's dramatic call upon the world for political and economic co-operation. Several quarters believed that his plea will do much to aid the success of the London economic conference and the disarmament conference.

Mid-week trade reports said that the marked upswing in iron and steel demand recently has lost some of its force but "Iron Age" reported that ingot output now stands at 35 per cent of capacity, as compared with 31 per cent a week ago. Railroad shops in the Middle West are beginning to take steel in a small way, it was reported, but automobile buying is tapering off.

POWER OUTPUT UP

Electric power production, however, continued to show marked improvement. Output for the week ended May 13 amounted to 1,468,035,000 kilowatt hours, a gain of 2.2 per cent over the corresponding week a year ago. This represented the greatest percentage gain over the previous year for any week since the period ended April 12, 1931, and is a natural reflection of broadening demand in all branches of industry.

The dollar was strong with sterling at $3.89¼, a decline of 3 cents, while French francs were quoted at 4.55 cents, a loss of 4 points.

New York Stock Exchange has approved an application for listing 500,000 additional shares of $1 par common stock of Curtiss-Wright Corp. Directors of the company have authorized sale of 50,000 shares at $137,500 and have also offered to sell 450,000 additional shares at $2.75 each at any time up to Dec. 1.

Proceeds will be used in connection with the mortgage indebtedness of the corporation's subsidiaries and for general corporate purposes. Identity of actual or prospective purchasers of the additional stock has not been disclosed.

Twenty-three steamers will bring raw silk cargoes to west coast ports from the Orient during June. Ten ships will dock at San Francisco, five at Vancouver, four at Los Angeles and four at Seattle.

Boston Wool Mart Prices Are Strong

"Prices of Ohio and similar fleeces continue to show a strong upward tendency. Strictly combing 56s and 48s, 50s Ohio and similar fleeces are selling in the range 28-30c in the grease, a number of sales having recently been closed at the maximum figure of the range. Small quantities of strictly combing 64s and finer Ohio fleeces are selling at around 28c in the grease, with current estimates of scoured basis equivalent of grease prices ranging 62-65c," say the Boston office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Chase Harris Men Plan a New Firm

A group of executives, all formerly of Harris, Forbes & Co. and more recently with Chase Harris Forbes Corporation, are forming a corporation to begin business about June 1, 1933.

The corporation will transact a general investment business and will be organized by the following: John K. Starkweather, Samuel S. Rodman and Don C. Wheaton, all of New York; Howard E. Duryea of Philadelphia; John S. Hardin of Baltimore, Eugene R. Black, Jr., of Atlanta; and William H. Culbertson of Buffalo.

Grains Are Higher in Chicago Market

Chicago, May 17 (AP)—Grain prices opened higher today on reports of unwelcome rains of the corn belt and adverse conditions for spring wheat seeding in Canada. Opening 1-8—⅜ higher, wheat afterward held near the initial range. Corn started 1-8—⅜ advance, and subsequently rose further.

Hupp's Employment Shows an Increase

Detroit, May 17—Hupp Motor Car Corp. employment increased to 909 May 12 from 373 March 1. Of the 909 working May 12, 789 averaged eight hours a day five days a week, while 267 of the 373 March 1 averaged eight hours a day five days a week.

Cotton Steady in New York Trading

New York, May 17—Cotton futures today were steady, unchanged to 2 higher on active trade buying which offset lower Liverpool cables. May unquoted; July, 8.65; October, 8.85; December, 8.96; January, 9.09, March, 9.21.

Brown Co. Enters Textile Fibre Field

Brown Co., Maine wood pulp manufacturer, has entered the textile fiber field on a limited commercial scale. Its product, Solka yarn, is made from the same highly purified cellulose used in the manufacture of rayon. Since it is spun by a process exclusive with the Brown Co. it is free from competition in the price field.

Moderates Dollar's Changes

Paris, May 17 (AP)—A big dollar operator, described in banking circles as the "Washington Equalization Board," is said to be the influence that for two or three weeks has been moderating fluctuations in the dollar quotation.

The centralization selling by the "Washington Equalization Board" apparently has been neither commercial nor speculative. Brokers estimated that it amounted to millions daily. Today's advance brought lively covering operations by speculators.

$49,000 IN BEER TAX

When the beer bill was pending before the legislature it was estimated, based on pre-prohibition statistics, that Massachusetts would use about 1,500,000 barrels of beer a year, which at $1 a barrel, would net the state $1,500,000. For the 23 days in April, the $1 tax has brought the state the sum of $49,000 from its three breweries. There are no figures yet on the amount due on the immense quantities of beer that has been imported into the state.

NICHOLSON PULLS FAST ONE

Senator Donald W. Nicholson, of Wareham, put over a "fast one" on Senator William Shanahan of Lynn. Shanahan had been speaking for a considerable period of time in favor of passing the referendum bill on pari-mutuels, and the Senate, anxious to go on a prearranged golf outing, was restless. Nicholson got Shanahan to yield for what he thought was a question, and was dumfounded when Nicholson moved adjournment, which carried amid the laughter of his colleagues.

In 14 months the government has loaned the railroads $365,782,845 to meet taxes, etc.

Perhaps that's the solution of everything—let the government give us money to give to the government.

* * *

BETTER LUCK NEXT TIME

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

In the excitement of chasing chicken thieves in the early morning hours at Sheldon Saturday Marvin Garrett saw a car shooting past the Campbell filling station and feeling sure it was the thieves, he fired into the tire, blowing it up. It was the car of W. G. Baird who was on the way to the Beeny Undertaking establishment to ask the hearse to come after the body of his father. Marvin regretted the incident naturally.

It is not so easy
And not so dry.

News item says Shaw thinks he knew more about the world and its inhabitants before he circled the globe than he does now.

Which is probably the first time G. B. S. ever agreed with the inhabitants of this great country. But anyway, most Americans thought he knew more, too.

IDYL OF THE IRIS

(To Ida, Apple Cider of Me Eye, Yi, Yi!)

Aye! Let us eye the eye and classify
Its whys and wherefores, isometric-wise.
To analyze just why I idolize
My Ida's eyes would but intensify
My wild desires; and yet, to pacify
Inquiring guys, I'll try to itemize
And most, their sprightly sparkle, albeit shy.
But Ida's cider's spryer than her eyes,
I find! My sighs rise nigh sky high, whilst I
Decry the blight of rye on Ida's rye—
If I might piratize my Ida's prize
Hard cider, I'd be darn sight satisfied,

Maine's Banks, Fires

A Series of Troubles

Our hearts go out to the people of Maine in the great adversities they have suffered.

Two conflagrations in successive weeks have destroyed 3,000 of their homes and probably $4,000,000 in property.

These were adversities which spread with devastating fury which the weak hand of man could not stay.

But the people of Maine, many times the number unfortunately affected by the conflagrations, had previously suffered and are suffering today from extensive adversities which were utterly superficial in their character and utterly the result of dishonest conspiracies.

There are entire counties in the Pine Tree State which have had either no bank facilities, or, at best, very inadequate bank facilities since the banking holiday of March 4.

These banks had been reliable and very firm financial institutions for generations, until their managers allowed them to be dominated by the Insull interests and to be loaded up with securities that were as worthless as wallpaper.

The public of Maine have suffered severely from these financial depredations. Millions of their dollars have been isolated from them. Their properties have been foreclosed. Their credit has been impaired or completely destroyed.

All these results of the banking adversity could have been avoided if the banking officials of Maine had followed the advice of the Boston Evening American to beware of spurious holding corporations and to refuse to make unholy political alliances with speculators and promoters.

The people of Maine will work their way ultimately out of these troubles. They are a reliable, dependable and ingenious people. If energy and character are worthwhile, as they are, Governor Brann will prove himself a good leader for them in their grave emergencies.

But they have paid a heavy penalty from the mismanagement of their funds. They must decide that this is the era of the new deal when banks shall be run as banks and not as the side issues of speculative and political enterprises.

Spare the Children

A Word to Motorists

The next time you pass a schoolhouse, stop and walk into it.

And then say to yourself that ALL THE CHILDREN IN THESE FIVE CLASSROOMS are to be killed on the highways of this State this year, the victims of the heedlessness and consummate selfishness and recklessness of our automobile drivers.

That, startling as it may seem, is exactly what is happening on our roadways.

The slaughter of the innocents has reached such tragic proportions that Morgan T. Ryan, the State Registrar of Motor Vehicles, has felt compelled to appeal to the motorists to show some concern for the welfare and safety of the children.

These children are of tender age. Still immature, they have no conception of the dangers which constantly confront them.

If they play in the streets, or if they suddenly dash off the sidewalk in the course of their pastimes, it is because they are still young and unfamiliar with the adult sense of caution and prudence.

For that reason, they are all the more to be protected.

Motorists must show care and patience in driving through the congested streets. The lives of these innocent little boys and girls are altogether too precious to be laid upon the altar of recklessness.

Pate's Plan for Heroes

Commander Pate of the Veterans of Foreign Wars has very sensibly and very intelligently presented the complaints of the wounded and sick war veterans who have been unjustly victimized by the new policy of "economy."

We have heard a great deal the past few months about the intention of the national government to eliminate the schemers who have drawn compensation for their imaginary war ailments.

It remained for Commander Pate to remind the public that there ARE real heroes who still bear the wounds of war, both physical and mental, and that no government could have the slightest excuse for reducing their compensation or denying them adequate hospital care and treatment.

This is not a good season for bonus marches. The psychology of the times is against them. Commander Pate has adopted the expedient of presenting his facts to the White House and to the New England members of Congress. That alone should suffice to produce honorable treatment for the veterans.

We'll Vote Wet Anyhow

So we are to have a non-partisan contest against the Eighteenth Amendment.

The wet delegates met at the Parker House and decided, like the Three Musketeers, to wage a joint campaign, one for all and all for one.

The Democratic Party in Nation and in State is pledged to repeal of prohibition. Therefore, it was quite consistent for this party in Massachusetts to offer its support to all the wet delegates, whether they be Democrats or Republicans.

Chairman Terry of the Republican State Committee found himself embarrassed by the conditions which exist within his party. He could not offer such support, because his party has its drys as well as its wets. Therefore, he will have to carry water on both shoulders.

The outcome will be the same, anyway. The people of Massachusetts will elect all the wet delegates by an overwhelming majority.

Pennies Into Dollars

Pennies paid into the Federal Treasury on a vast multitude of business transactions will have no appreciable effect upon anybody's pocketbook.

Yet this enormous flood of pennies will provide the dollars that Uncle Sam needs to finance his public works undertakings, and thereby make jobs for labor and revive the activities of industry, commerce and agriculture.

O. O. McIntyre

New York Day by Day

At Luchow's

NEW YORK, May 17—James Huneker would be pleased with the return of the old literary flavor to his 14th street haunt, Luchow's. It's not as yet what it was in the days it inspired the "Down Where the Wurburger Flows" song, but a mellowness permeates the dark-timbered gloom. And it is packed to the guard rails.

In a corner Dudley Field Malone dimpled into his usual O. O. McIntyre chubby smile as he lifted a pewter tankard. The same corner, incidentally, where Huneker heckled bright toss-pots of his time into urawn discussions of insoluble problems. With Victor Herbert beaming benignly over a seidel.

Fannie Hurst seemed the center of exuberant talk at another table, and Theodore Dreiser, flaunting his white cowl high, strode through the room in the wake of a vital, distinguished company. One missed, however, the high cheer of old Fritz's "Vell, how iss de eppitite this evening?"

Sprinkled about, too, were Nathan Burkan, Karl Kitchen, Joe Moore, Dick Berlin and Ray Lillibridge. A genial aura, yet there's still a strain to recapture the fictitious fellowship that once made Luchow's. Jannsen's and other foamy citadels the delightfully carefree havens they were.

The Hofbrau, on a Broadway corner in the 30's, was another tavern that specialized in sweating steins and close barbershop harmony. One of the town's humorous touches was offered by it two days after a declaration of war on Germany. In an excess of patriotism a gaunt American flag rippled an electric red, white and blue across the way Kid McCoy's Poodle Dog featured that charm found so notoriously among the worthless. It was the haunt of Nickey Arnstein and Arnold Rothstein.

Another vulgarly vivid spot was a barrel house on Sixth avenue known as Black Ida's, run incongruously enough by an Irishman named Paddy Moriarity. Beer at five cents a scone included the tastiest bowl of black bean soup with crackers in the world. A rendezvous of sports du pave, yet rear tables buzzed with newspaper brouhaha, for many of the best reporters were attracted there after edition time by the fragrant potage.

As a fledgling magazinist attached tenuously to Hampton's, my New York in that period lay between the Knickerbocker hotel on 42d street and Madison Square. Much of the inspiration of those raw apprenticeship days came from walking southward in the dusk to gaze at Diana poising her gilt loveliness atop Stanford White's famous tower. In the magnificence of youth, life did not have a grain of grimness. Diana seemed winged and whispering with chariot promises and the surrounding stars asterisks of hope. So buoyant was the well-carpentered business of living that later when I lost my job I didn't believe it. I thought some office blunder sent the discharge to the wrong person. I even practised how I would dismiss the apology with slight shrug and polite chuckle. Instead, I learned the arcadian day's end with the first dismissal. After that existence is an eternal grapple with reality.

On Park Row the literary luncheon place was Hahn's. The Algonquin was little known save as residence of Rex Beach and Ethel Barrymore. William Johnston, of the World and friend of O. Henry's, took me to Hahn's. He went to a table to say good-bye to a gentleman going to England to live. Casually he mentioned it was Robert Frost and my eyes bulged. A print of one of his farm-yard drawings hung over our parlor fireplace. I felt suddenly hurled into the glamorous currents of metropolitan life.

On Sunday nights were those beer-sandwich spreads at Fred and Helena Dayton's—the Bob Wildhacks, Mary McKinnon, Charles and Kathleen Norris, Berton Braley, Herb Roth, Ray Rohn, Ethel Plummer, Norman Jacobson. And that hilarious night of pagan simplicities when H. T. Webster tried, in sudden seizure of gallantry, to flick a tiny wen from the neck of an imperious opera singer, thinking it a cake crumb.

During this epoch I sent a jet of fiction to old McClure's, a stirring romance of the Ohio valley. A rereading of the rejected manuscript revealed this gem: "Jed's two mules were a sturdy pair, teamed in double harness." Which inspired that old twirp, Arthur McKeogh, meanly to observe tautology had attained its tautest.

Just Folks

A Simple Supper

Last night we had for supper pork and beans and bread and tea,
And I did some over-eating, which is rather strange for me,
For the beans were cooked by mother, and since first she was a bride,

I forgot the spastic something that has troubled me for years,
And the nervous indigestion, with its multitude of fears.
I forgot the doctor's orders to beware of this and that,
And remembered, rather strangely, our first Fourteenth Avenue flat.

We were young and brave and struggling and had debts we hoped to pay,
With the future all before us, and we supped the self-same way.
And we planned and dreamed and wondered and with high hope sat us down
To tea and bread and butter and to beans molasses brown.

Well, we're back once more to planning and to dreaming as of old.
We are looking to the future and some rainbow's pot of gold.
And so filled with true contentment did that mealtime seem to be

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

You Can't Explain

ONE FACT I've paid plenty to learn. You probably won't accept it, preferring to make your own experiments, just as I did. So go ahead and make them! But don't say I didn't warn you that, whatever you do—

IT'S NO USE TO EXPLAIN.

Naturally, if you live at all abundantly you're going to do scads of things which need explaining. Your friends will doubtless expect explanations. And you'll want to explain—how desperately you'll want to explain! Often you'll feel that it's impossible to go on with life unless you can make people understand what a Swell Guy you are inside, even if you have acted rough or sappy.

But no matter how desperate your desire, or urgent your need, the fact still stands—

YOU'LL ONLY MAKE THINGS WORSE IF YOU TRY TO EXPLAIN.

For the simple truth is, the thing can't be done. Though you had the wisdom of Solomon and the eloquence of Cicero, plus the lowdown of Winchell, you still couldn't tell anyone why you do what you do, or why you are what you are.

FOR YOU DON'T KNOW YOURSELF!

YOU, YOURSELF, CAN'T EXPLAIN EVEN TO YOURSELF YOUR OWN ACTS.

You doubt that? You're sure, aren't you, that you could tell me in five minutes just why you committed any act of your life? All right—try! Drop this article. Take out your watch. Now, for five minutes, say your piece.

Tell me, for example, just why you made a fool of yourself last week by boasting about yourself before that utter stranger.

That's fine—you start right in, full steam. But what's the matter? You're beginning to flounder! Repeating yourself! Going off on detours! Something wrong? You're not getting ahead with that explanation as fast as you thought you could, are you, partner?

Of course you aren't. And the reason's plain enough—

There isn't any one reason why any of us do anything.

Instead, for even the simplest act, there are millions of reasons—reasons that go back to our birth and the birth of our fathers before us—reasons so tangled that there never yet was a man who could trace them to their source.

Literally, God, alone, knows why we do anything.

Yet you think you can produce, in five minutes, the simple and complete reason why you pulled a boner. Should your face be red!

No, you can't explain. And there's no use trying. And the bigger the boner, the more fool you'll make of yourself if you try to make it all plain.

And that fact is going to make you mighty heartsick, Stranger, when you first discover it. For a while you'll feel a loneliness such as you never felt before—a bitterness and bewilderment — and chances are, like many another fine soul, you'll pick yourself a hole and crawl in for a while. Then, if you have sense, you'll go on to the next lesson—

YOU'LL REALIZE THAT IF THIS THING IS TRUE OF YOU, IT IS ALSO TRUE OF EVERYONE ELSE.

Every man lacks the key to his own mystery. Every man is a prisoner in the dark labyrinth of himself. But, if you look at it right, that's a blessed bond, as well as a reason for bewailing.

After all, why did you want to explain? So you could come nearer to the other human—stand inside the warmth of his affection and respect and so soothe the pangs of your own humiliation and loneliness. Wasn't that the reason?

BUT COULD ANY POSSIBLE EXPLANATION BRING YOU TWOAS NEAR TOGETHER AS THE REALIZATION OF YOUR MUTUAL DUMBNESS?

Of course it couldn't. There you are, both in the dark. What does it matter if you can't explain your individual acts, so long as you can hold each other's hands, comfort each other's hurts? Love—that's the great thing. Friendliness and tolerance—they meet neither understanding nor explanation, and they are within the reach of the slowest brain.

So don't try to explain yourself. Accept yourself humbly; give yourself generously; and for the sake of your own foolishness, be kind to the other fools. That's all the wisdom you need.

THIS IS LIFE

Need Laws to Ban Sweatshops and Return Prosperity

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

MISS MUGGLEBEE'S solid and documented articles about the return of the sweatshop to American industry furnish more than sufficient proof to anyone who needs proof that the need for regulation between man and man is as great today as it ever was.

R. E. ROGERS

One hundred years ago the lot of the industrial worker was unbelievably dreadful. For a century it has been ameliorating in the main. Many of us have come to believe that, save in the more backward and ignorant parts of the United States, the experience of the past generation has thoroughly convinced employers as well as workers that short hours, fair wages, and good working conditions pay dividends as well as satisfy a modern and improved sense of social justice.

Jefferson believed that on the whole the common man could be trusted in matters of business and of politics to do the right thing. He knew that the common man was imperfect and ignorant, but he did not share Hamilton's belief that he must be ruled by an aristocracy of birth and property and achievement. He believed that practice in government would make man more competent in government and that popular education would gradually improve man's grasp on affairs until he could be trusted to organize a just and liberal society.

High Wages Bring Prosperity

The modern Liberal, as he likes to call himself, inherited this belief of Jefferson's, plus a remnant of the belief of the old Utilitarians, that the practice of enlightened self-interest would result in the greatest good for the greatest number. These beliefs in conjunction should have produced an industrial society increasingly free from the abuses of the nineteenth century.

Our American traditions are all against basic regulation of business and industry. That is why it has never been possible to put an end nationally to child labor; nor in most states to pass legislation on hours of labor, wages and working conditions which would really regulate. The great increase in the number of enlightened business men who have come to believe that their business best prospers when the workingman prospers has tended to weaken the argument of those who see safety only in drastic regulation.

But it is beginning to look as if we had overlooked one fact: that this improvement had largely been forced upon the employer of labor. The old fashioned employer, who had no control save the law of supply and demand, had his employes at his mercy. The stories of child labor in the English textile mills a century ago, of naked girls drawing carts in coal mines, of the little chimney sweeps, of whole families working for less than one man's living wage—these are pretty dreadful. What put an end to them?

First, governmental regulation. Second, the labor union. For a hundred years these two forces have forced the employer to be decent. The intelligent and reasonable have learned the lesson. What we have forgotten is that in every walk of life there are people without intelligence, reason, or goodwill, people essentially greedy, stupid and short-sighted, and cruel, who cannot be taught anything save by force.

Ignorant Sub-Humans at Fault

This is true of labor as well as of the employer. The union in its power has developed abuses that demand curbing. There are fair and reasonable unions. There are also greedy, stupid and anti-social unions, which power has made mad. This depression is teaching the unions some forgotten truths, particularly that of moderation.

But for the moment we are concerned with the employers who have taken advantage of the labor glut through unemployment to bring back the worst days of unregulated industry. In so doing they are proving enemies not merely to the worker but to fair and honest employers and to the public as well.

A recent writer suggested that it may be possible that the reason we make so slow progress in raising the level of human intelligence and decency is that large masses of what we call the human race are not really human at all—sub-human, so to speak—a low form of life with whom nothing constructive can be done. It is an interesting suggestion and would explain a good deal. Killing two birds at one blow, it would explain both the sweatshop employer and the racketeering gangster.

The natural impulse would lead us to clap on drastic regulations, which might adequately take care of the wrong kind of employer and the wrong kind of worker, but which would probably seriously cramp the natural liberties of the decent employer and the conscientious laborer. That must be guarded against. That is why many well-intentioned and altruistic people in every walk of life, employer and employed, rather shake their heads at Secretary Frances Perkins' bill to regulate hours and wages in such a wholesale, blanket fashion as her bill provides for.

Time for Laws to Tighten Up

But it ought to be possible to devise legislation to make industry safe for people who must earn their living at it; to guarantee that people shall know in advance what they are going to earn a week and not be robbed by ex-post-facto wage scales; to fix piece work scales so that it will be possible to earn a fair minimum wage by skill and speed; and to establish machinery by which actual injustice and thievery on the part of employers can be quickly investigated and harshly clamped down upon.

These are moderate enough. They would not hurt legitimate business. They would not pamper the worker. They would not put the slow and incompetent on a par with the quick and skilful. They would not take an employer's right to run his own business away from him. They would not abolish the open shop. They would not socialize business. They would leave some traces of Americanism in business, the Americanism of the intelligent and well-intentioned employer, one who is willing to run his business decently but is unwilling to surrender it to the workers.

I take little comfort in the news stories that most of these sweatshop employers in New Bedford and Lowell and other places have sneaked in from New York. For that must mean that they can't carry on their games there, that the work of "Al" Smith and Miss Perkins have been effective enough to bar old-style sweating. If they have to come to Massachusetts because our law makes it a kind of Tom Tiddlers' Ground for the sweater, it is obviously high time that our laws be tightened up. As Theodore Roosevelt once said: "The best way to answer criticism which is largely unjust is to remedy the actual injustice which does exist and so to shut its mouth."
